The Hungarian at St. John's, N. B.

France Demands the Restoration of the Italian Princes.

FURTHER BY THE CITY OF BALTIMORE.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Thursday, Nov. 10.

The Canadian Company's screw steamship Hungarian, from Liverpool on Wednesday, the 2d inst., called off this port and sent in this morning forty-two persons, whom she had saved from the wreck of a vessel from Labrador for ——. The lives of her officers and crew were nobly risked to preserve their fellow-creatures from impending death, and the greatest praise which can be bestowed is due to them.

The Hungarian proceeded on her voyage to Portland, Me. She has 64 passengers.

She passed on the 3d the steamship Indian, from Quebec for Liverpool; also, the ship Canada, both off Tory Island.

The Hungarian, on her outward voyage from Quebec, arrived at Liverpool on the 29th.

The steamship City of Manchester, from New-York, arrived at Liverpool on the 30th.

The Royal Mail steamship Canada, from Boston viâ Halifax, arrived at Liverpool on the 30th.

The ship Charles Holmes, from Liverpool, bound to Mobile, has been totally wrecked at sea and her crew all lost.

Another heavy gale had been experienced on the English coast, but no disasters to American shipping had yet been reported.

Nothing further of an important character had become known in regard to the Royal Charter. The prospects of recovering the gold sunk with her were less encouraging than at first.

THE ITALIAN QUESTION.

NAPOLEON III. REQUIRES THE RESTORATION OF THE DUKES.

NAPOLEON had written a letter to the King of Sardinia, urging him to carry out the Villafranca agreement. In the letter he says that France demands that the Duke be recalled to Modena, that Parma be united to Piedmont, and that Tuscany, with an augmentation of her territory, be restored to the reign of the Grand Duke; and that the projected confederation, on the basis of moderate reforms, be carried out.

The Zurich Conference had again assembled, Count KAROLYI representing Austria in place of Count COLLOREDO, deceased, and all the treaties were expected to be signed in a few days.

It was asserted that the European Congress would take place with the adhesion of England.

GARIBALDI had arrived at Turin, for an interview with the King of Sardinia. He was enthusiastically received all along the route.

THE HISPANO-MOORISH WAR.

Spain was expected to commence offensive operations against Morocco about the 8th of November.

France disclaims the idea of aiding Spain in her war against Morocco.

CHANGE IN THE FRENCH MINISTRY.

The Duke of PADUA had retired from the French Ministry of the Interior. M. BURNAULT was his successor.

ADDITIONAL BY THE CITY OF BALTIMORE.

The steamship City of Baltimore, as announced in a portion of yesterday morning's edition, arrived here at an early hour yesterday. Her advices have been anticipated by the Vanderbilt, and superseded by the Hungarian, but dispatches from London on the morning of the 28th—two days later—are of an interesting character.

THE LATE GALE.

THE WRECK OF THE ROYAL CHARTER.

A gentleman, writing from Bangor, after visiting the wreck at dusk on Wednesday evening, says: "The only parts of the ship standing were a small part of the stern, with the wheel and screw-lifting apparatus. She struck at 3 o'clock on Wednesday morning, and broke up at 7. Before striking her cables parted, one after another. She tried to steam off the coast, but the wind blowing a hurricane she drifted ashore. Blue lights and rockets were fired for several hours before she struck. Several bodies were washed ashore, the majority greatly mutilated. Men were picking up sovereigns off the rocks, and an efficient guard was much wanted. The Collector of Customs is doing his best to protect the remains of the ship and cargo."

The Royal Charter was built at Queensburgh, and launched in August, 1855. She cost about £90,000, and her market value at the time of her loss was about £70,000. The ship was insured to the amount of $80,000. Insurances on the cargo have not transpired. Passengers arrived in Liverpool on the evening of the 27th, from Bangor, state that the country people had commenced to plunder the wreck. The local authorities had sent on the military, and it is stated that an application has been made to Capt. MENDS, of her Majesty's ship Hastings, lying in the Mersey, for assistance.

The following are the names of the saved:

LIVERPOOL, Thursday, Oct. 27—Midnight.

Reporters have arrived from the scene of the wreck and state that the vessel struck at 2 P. M., the strain being too great for the cables. At first but little alarm was felt, but some imminence of a dreadful death was apparent to all. One heroic sailor swam ashore and made fast a hawser by which several lives were saved, and more might have been had not the vessel parted in two with a dreadful crash, the funnel and machinery giving way. The passengers and crew were either killed by the falling masts or perished in the waves. Four hundred and seventy persons were lost and only thirty-one saved. All the women perished. There was no pilot on board, the signals made when the vessel reached Point Lynas not having been answered. The bullion, it is expected, will be recovered. A detachment of marines has been sent from Liverpool by Capt. MENDS, of the Hastings, to assist the local authorities.

FURTHER WRECKS.

At Bideford, a brig of about 200 tons, has been totally lost and the crew drowned. A boat was washed ashore marked "William Robertson." The Anne, of Whitehaven, has been totally lost and the crew drowned. The Eleanor, which drove ashore, was found from Cardiff to Liverpool. The cargo was landed. The Thistle, of Cardiff, has been totally lost, but the master, with five men, was saved. The Rose, of Padstow, was totally lost, but the master was saved. At Ilfracombe the bark Marlboro', of Baltimore, struck and became a total wreck in a quarter of an hour. The crew were saved with the exception of the second mate. Five other vessels are on the shore at Ilfracombe Bay and breaking up. The accounts from Falmouth state that the Cuba, of White, and another vessel, are on the Wenterton beach, total wrecks. Twelve hands were drowned.

The Silva, of Glasgow, has been totally lost. Crew saved.

At Pweelhelli, a large bark, laden with sugar, went ashore. The crew (Spaniards) were saved, except one boy. It was thought she was bound from Havana for Liverpool. At Rye, the Isabella, of Sunderland, went ashore and broke up. Crew saved. The Caroline, of Christiansand, got ashore at Dungeness and went to pieces; three of the crew were drowned. At Stretton, near Bute, the Beverley, of Cork, is a total wreck. One man lost. At Bristol, three pilot boats were sunk. Crews saved. At St. David's, Martha, of Meath, is a total wreck. Crew saved.

DESCRIPTION OF THE GALE IN LIVERPOOL.

From the Liverpool Post, Oct. 27.

One of the heaviest gales experienced at this port for several years occurred yesterday. As usual on similar occasions, considerable damage was done to the shipping, both on the river and in the channel, and we regret to find that some of the disasters were accompanied with loss of life. The weather has for some days past been unsettled, and yesterday morning, about 8 o'clock, a smart breeze sprung up from N.N.W. The wind gradually increased until about 11½, when the gale assumed a terrific character. The tide being at the flood, our river presented a scene seldom witnessed, the sea running so high as to render navigation during three or four hours of the day exceedingly difficult, if not perilous. Vessels were in imminent danger of drifting from their moorings and running ashore, or probably encountering a worse calamity. Yesterday was a Spring tide, the height, as given in the almanac, being 18 feet 2 inches. Owing to the gale, however, the height of the tide must have been two or three feet more than that stated, for the water was on a level with some of the pier-heads, at times washing completely over them.

At George's Pier the waves ran close up to the baths, and for some time the road in this direction was impassable. The North Landing-stage, from its situation, was more particularly exposed to the fury of the storm. Notwithstanding its immense size, it rolled heavily, at times the sea making a complete breach over the north end. Several steamboats were unable to come alongside to receive passengers for the American screw-steamers announced to sail in the afternoon. The North American and the City of Baltimore did not leave the river owing to the fury of the gale, and were detained until this morning, when they will proceed to sea.

In the town, slates were blown from the roofs of houses, and other similar casualties occurred, but, so far as we could learn, though there were one or two narrow escapes, no one sustained any injury. During the gale considerable excitement prevailed in the neighborhood of St. George's Church, consequent on a report having got abroad that the top of the church spire waved to and fro from the action of the wind.

DESTRUCTION OF PROPERTY THROUGHOUT GREAT BRITAIN.

From the Cork Reporter, Oct. 28.

The storm of Tuesday night and Wednesday appears to have caused great damage on land as well as at sea. The towns on the coast have suffered from the torrents of rain with high tides. Rivers have overflowed their banks. In Devonshire the turnpike roads are greatly injured. The sea broke in on the south at four different points. The London mail was nearly five hours late at Plymouth yesterday. The North Devon line is very seriously injured. Granite coping was washed down nearly 200 yards at one place, and both walls are broken for a quarter of a mile. Embankments have given way at Worthing—the sea rushed into the middle of the town, which is more than two hundred yards above high-water mark. The Steyne Hotel lost £500 by damage to windows. Between Boxhill and Hastings 250 yards of the Hastings Railway have been washed away. At Portland the damage caused by heavy seas on the temporary timber support of the breakwater will entail very serious loss to the contractor, Mr. LEATHER, and will also suspend the quarrying operations in the convict quarries. The communication to the outer or great breakwater is cut off by a gap of about 200 feet in length, and until this is repaired the depositing of stones to form the breakwater must cease.

AFFAIRS OF ITALY.

PROCLAMATION OF GARIBALDI.

The London Post's correspondent says, the Austrian Government is affording every facility to the Neapolitan agents at Trieste in recruiting for a Foreign Legion, to replace the Swiss and for a body guard of his Sicilian Majesty. Corps of all nations are engaged and forwarded on to Gaeta. GARIBALDI has addressed a proclamation to the Neapolitans. The following are extracts:

TO OUR BROTHERS OF NAPLES:

Brothers, we have combatted the Austrians—we have fought these insolent oppressors of Italy, and we have beaten them. We have fought as Italians fight when united, and you were not with us. The shout of victory was heard in every dialect except yours, and we know your hearts beat high in the cause of the country. Yes, Providence has decreed the union and alliance of our family—of this poor Italian family.

Foreigners and priests labor in vain. In vain they seek to sow discord to corrupt the hapless people whom they have divided often, and so often sold to the strangers in vain. Our brothers of the South have cleared the minds of our brothers of the North. The sons of Procedas, the Masselellas and the Pieros have grasped the victorious hand of the soldiers of Palestro and San Martino.

PRUSSIA AND TUSCANY.

The official Prussian Gazette of Thursday says the statements published by the papers concerning the reception of the deputation by the Minister of Foreign Affairs, are in essential parts, inexact. The Prussian Gazette lays particular stress on the fact that the deputation was not received officially, because the Tuscan Government has not been recognized by the Prussian Court. The interview was also strictly private. Particulars not desired to be made public.

PROBABLE RISING IN NAPLES.

A telegraphic dispatch to Queenstown, dated Oct. 28 says that a rising in Naples was considered imminent.

The Paris correspondent of the Times says the news is vital enough, for, according to all human calculations, we may reckon on a rising in Naples before long.

REACTIONARY PLOTS IN TUSCANY.

The correspondent of the Times states that the Tuscan Government have got scent of a plot with a reactionary intent, in which, as usual, the Red Republicans and Mazzinians were in league with Grand Ducal and priestly authorities. The papers seized afford a pretty clear evidence of a pretty extensive reactionary Republican plot. The conspirators belong to the upper classes and possess considerable funds, as they inlisted a number of people of the lower rank, some of whom received as much as 3s. 10d. a day.

SPAIN AND MOROCCO.

The Times says it has often dwelt on the impossibility of a period of quiet following a period of success, and now, after the war with Austria is conciliated, there cannot be any doubt that France is preparing to interfere in the quarrels of Europe more actively than was expected, and it is quite possible that the French and Spanish forces will combine to carry out the plans for obtaining redress for the insults at Ceuta. But the subjection of Spain to French influence, and the formation of a system of which France is the chief, and Spain, Piedmont, the Papal States and Naples, are the dependents, deserve the attention of every politician among us.

A letter dated Gibraltar, Oct. 16, received at Plymouth by a naval officer, says that the Spanish have there one ship-of-the-line, three corvettes, one sloop of war, and three paddle-steamers. The French have one three-decker, four two-deckers, and three smaller vessels. The British forces consist of the Marlborough, the Edgar, the Orion, the Neptune, the Princess Royal, the Centurion, the Victor Emanuel, the Conqueror, the Cæsar, the Doris, the Scylla, the Cadmus the Scourge, and the Lapwing. The Edgar, Neptune and Princess Royal are expected to sail shortly for England, and the Cæsar for Malta. The Vulture is at Tangier.

The French expeditionary force to Morocco is to be augmented by two brigades, including two regiments of Zouaves.

MADRID, Tuesday, Oct. 25.

The rumors which have been current regarding a peaceful settlement with Morocco are without any foundation. Generals ZABALA and SERANO, and others, chiefs of the army, took their departure this evening. Gen. OVANO leaves on Saturday. The Spanish General was still at Tangiers on the 24th inst.

ALGESIRAS, Wednesday, Oct. 26.

The Spanish Consul to Tangiers has just arrived here with his household.

ENGLAND AND FRANCE.

The Paris correspondent of the Times reports the state of affairs between England and France, as to the Congress, as being more encouraging, and it was hoped that after all an English Plenipotentiary would take his seat with the representatives of the other Powers for the purpose of settling the Italian question.

The Herold's correspondent says that the tone of the semi-official journals of Paris is daily becoming more acrimonious towards England—the Italian difficulty and the Suez Canal affair being the principal subjects for abuse.

The Constitutionnel contains an article on the Suez Canal of a decidedly menacing character. The article begins by asserting that the prohibition sent by the Sultan to the Pasha of Egypt, has been obtained by the interest of Sir H. BULWER, and remarks, if it is important to the Powers of Europe, and more especially to France, to know this fact officially. France need not be astonished, for it is only in accordance with her eternally aggressive and selfish policy. England is charged with the design of ruining M. D. LESSEPS, in order at a future time to cut through the Isthmus, and thus complete her line of exclusive protress from Jersey to the East Indies, and at the same time to put herself in a position to cut off all communications between France and Algeria This plan, it says, is a grand conception, but too ambitious for the present day, and France will not stand it.

A letter on the 22d Oct. from Naples, states that H. M. S. Exmouth has been telegraphed for to Malta, to protect British interests at Naples.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The papers announce the death of Lieut. Gen. G G. LEWIS, Colonel-Commandant of the Royal London Engineers, who arrived at Brighton on Monday last.

The Daily News continues to announce fresh contributions to the Garibaldi Musket Fund.

The Herald contains a leader on the loss of the Royal Charter, and in the City Articles of all the papers the painful occurrence is alluded to in terms of the deepest regret and sorrow.

TURKEY.

The Austrian Lloyds' steamer had arrived, bringing advices from Constantinople to the 22d inst. The nomination of RUFUSTA PACHA as Grand Vizier has been confirmed.

The Commissioners for the settlement of the boundary question in Montenegro were obliged to leave the country, being attacked by the inhabitants. Public order has since been reëstablished.

CHINA.

The steamer Thebes, which had been hired by the French, was wrecked on the passage between Hong Kong and Turono.

The Success of the Utica Shuffle Still in Doubt.

THE RESULTS ELSEWHERE.

ALBANY, Thursday, Nov. 10.

We make the footings to-night on majorities for Secretary of State, based on a greater number of correct returns than have been hitherto published, but still with many counties only estimated, as follows: LEAVENWORTH'S majorities, 45,007; JONES' majorities, 44,722—LEAVENWORTH ahead, 285. In our estimates we believe we have given the Republicans liberal figures; we therefore regard the result as in great doubt.

The Evening Journal still claims the election of the whole Republican ticket, but by a reduced majority from what it at first supposed.

The hard fight for Justice of the Supreme Court in this District, which has excited much interest, closes by the election of RUFUS W. PECKHAM by over 1,000 majority. This result is produced by Sullivan County, which gives a majority for PECKHAM, while it was claimed for HARRIS at 700. PECKHAM carries five counties out of seven,

GRANT, Democrat, is elected Senator in the Sullivan and Orange District, making nine Democratic Senators chosen.

Last year, the Journal remarks, when Gov. MORGAN carried the State by 17,440, these counties and towns gave a majority of 1,361 against him. This year they give a majority of 3,869 against LEAVENWORTH.

The returns received do not yet enable us to speak positively of the result. Our table, as far as it goes, is made up from actual figures, and indicates a favorable result. Where PARKER, last year, had 1,361 majority, JONES has now 3,869. But we are yet without advices from several strong Republican counties, where we cannot hope for as much as they gave last year.

Some of the estimates published are very wide of the mark. While we see nothing yet to cause us to fear the defeat of any candidate on our State ticket, the result will be close.

The Legislature.

The Trenton American computes the Legislature to stand:

Senate—8 Opposition, 12 Democrats and 1 American.

Members elect—Democrats, 4; Opposition, 3.

Holding over—Democrats, 8; Opposition, 5; American, 1.

Assembly—Opposition, 30; Democrats, 28; Americans, 2.

The Newark Advertiser of last evening says: The Senate will stand Democrats, 12; Opposition, 8; Shanghai American, 1.

The House—Regular Opposition, 30; Regular Democrats, 27; Shanghai American, 2; Independent Democrat, 1.

Joint ballot—Regular Democrats, 39; Regular Opposition, 38; Shanghai Americans, 3; Independent Democrat, 1.

The last Legislature stood: Senate—Democrats, 13; Opposition, 7; Shanghai Americans, 1. House—Opposition, 35; Democrats, 24; Shanghai American, 1.

Neither party, it will be seen, has the majority—the balance of power remaining with the Straight Americans. Upon their action will depend the appointments to be made in joint meeting. The appointments in joint meeting are for State and county Officers. No United States Senator is to be chosen till 1863, when the term of Hon. J. R. THOMSON, Democrat, expires. None of the present members of the Senate, unless reëlected, will, therefore, have a vote for his successor, as the election will be made by the Legislature of 1863.

THE ELECTION IN WISCONSIN.

CHICAGO, Thursday, Nov. 10.

The returns from Wisconsin are yet very incomplete. The Milwaukee Sentinel of to-day, says that those received confirm the opinion that the entire Republican State ticket is elected by a handsome majority, and that the Republicans retain the ascendancy in the State Legislature.

THE VIRGINIA REBELLION.

John E. Cook Convicted of Murder and Insurrection.

Green, Coppick, Copeland and Cook Sentenced to be Hung with Brown.

CHARLESTOWN, Va., Thursday, Nov. 10.

The Court remained in session until 9 o'clock last night, when a verdict of "guilty" was rendered against COOK, for murder and insurrection.

Mr. VOORHEES delivered a powerful address to the Jury in favor of the prisoner, drawing tears from the eyes of the most embittered of his auditors.

This morning a motion for a new trial was argued and overruled.

District-Attorney HARDING refuses to sign a nolle prosequi in favor of STEVENS, demanding that he shall be tried by Virginia. The Court, however, has handed the prisoner over to the United States Marshal, paying no attention to the objections of Mr. HARDING.

CHARLESTOWN, Thursday, Nov. 10—10 P. M.

The Court, to-day, sentenced COOK and all the other prisoners to be hung on the 16th of December. It is supposed that Gov. WISE will respite BROWN, and hang all on the same day. The Court has adjourned for the term.

CONDITION OF GERRIT SMITH.

UTICA, Thursday, Nov. 10.

GERRIT SMITH shows continued marks of insanity. No one is allowed to see him, but it is understood that he refers in his ravings to the Harper's Ferry matters and supposes himself arrested.

From the Rochester Daily Express.

Ever since the dénouement of the mad and foolhardy attempt of old BROWN at Harper's Ferry, there have been rumors that GERRIT SMITH was in a most distressing and pitiable state of mind.

It is said that he has been constantly wringing his hands and bemoaning the fate of poor BROWN, and accusing himself with having been instrumental in bringing his friends into their present sore troubles.

While making a brief visit to the neighborhood of Mr. SMITH'S residence, a few days since, we learned that his friends were apprehensive that his reason would give way under the load of grief and anxiety the events of Harper's Ferry and neighborhood has occasioned, and we were not, therefore, surprised to learn this morning that these fears have been realised, and that the unhappy man is now a raving lunatic. He was taken to the Lunatic Asylum at Utica yesterday.

From the Utica Herald.

We are greatly pained to learn that GERRIT SMITH, the free-hearted but sadly erratic philanthropist, became, on Monday last, an inmate of the New-York State Lunatic Asylum, where it has been found necessary to place him, on account of marked insanity. We learn that he is very violent, and has exhibited a disposition to commit suicide, and that an attendant keeps constant watch over him to prevent him from laying violent hands on himself. This result, we hear, is attributed to the connection of Mr. SMITH'S name with the Harper's Ferry affair; many will regard it as the the consequence of long-seated and marked disease.

HUMANITY OF JOHN BROWN.

The Elwood (Kansas) Free Press narrates the following incident:

"We have no disposition to extenuate the crimes recently committed by this noted man. But there is no reason why the acts of kindness and charity which he was wont to perform should be forgotten now that he is about to suffer the doom of a felon.

An instance of this sort fell under our personal observation. At the sacking of Ossawottomie one of the most bitter Pro-Slavery men in Lykins County was killed. His name was ED. TIMMONS. Some time afterwards BROWN stopped at the log-house where TIMMONS had lived. His widow and children were there, and in great destitution. BROWN inquired into their wants, relieved their distresses, and supported them until her friends in Missouri, informed through BROWN of the condition of Mrs. TIMMONS, had time to come to her and carry her to her former home. Mrs. TIMMONS fully appreciated the great kindness thus shown to her, but never learned that Capt. JOHN BROWN was her benefactor.

THE BROWNS IN KANSAS.

The Lawrence (Kansas) Herald of Freedom makes the following statements concerning the conduct of JOHN BROWN and his son, during the troubled times of the Territory. The writer was in a position to know the facts of the case, and we copy the narrative as he gives it, though it presents the conduct and character of BROWN in a very different light from that in which they are usually represented:

"Our acquaintance with JOHN BROWN, Jr., commenced in the Autumn of 1855, and was continued, without intermission, until the middle or latter part of September, 1856. For three and a half months he was an hourly companion, a prisoner with us near Lecompton, and since that period we have been in occasional correspondence with him. Unless recently removed or deceased, his present residence is Lindenville, Ashtabula County, Ohio.

As we stated last week, he raised a company of his neighbors and friends, and arrived at Palmyra on the 22d of May, 1856, the day after the destruction of Lawrence. After looking about that vicinity for a day or so, on the 24th of May he marched towards Osawatomie, and arrived near the town, where they encamped for the night. Old JOHN BROWN, the father, stepped out in front of the company, and said: 'If there are any brave men here, let them follow me.' JOHN BROWN, Jr., replied: 'I have the honor of commanding this company. Whoever leaves it does so at his peril.' But Old BROWN succeeded in getting seven men to join his company, one of whom was FREDERICK BROWN, a son of the old man, who was subsequently shot while on his way to Osawatomie, on the morning of Aug. 30, 1856, and not after he was taken prisoner, as has been alleged. Some of the surviving seven of Old JOHN BROWN'S party still reside in Kansas. The curse of Almighty God rests on them, and we have no disposition to expose them at present to the public.

On the morning of the 25th of May, one of the heavy broad-swords—alluded to by us last week—which Old JOHN BROWN brought to Kansas, was found leaning against a tent, wet with blood and covered with hair. It was pronounced dog's hair, but soon after intelligence was received in the camp of the massacre of the WILKINSONS and DOYLES, on Pottawattomie Creek. JOHN BROWN, Jr., immediately mounted his horse in the greatest possible excitement, ordered his company to disband, and rode towards Osawatomie. The news of the horrid murder alluded to had preceded him, and the people were so shocked on his arrival there, because of it, and supposing JOHN, Jr., guilty of the outrage, they turned from him. He went from there to the residence of his uncle, Rev. Mr. ADAIR, where he had sent his wife and boy. The reports of the awful murder of his neighbors, the consciousness that his father, brother, and six other friends had been guilty of that terrible outrage, and the treatment he received at Osawatomie from his own political friends, crazed him. He sought the woods, and wandered about for days, with only an occasional gleam of recollection. He became tangled in the brushwood, waded streams, sometimes out upon the green prairie, and imagining crowds pursuing him. For days he suffered as only a sensitive and educated mind, wrecked by a great wrong, like the one we have very briefly alluded to, could suffer. He remembered seeing his little boy once, and kissing him, but cannot call to mind the mother. He learned by some means that a warrant was out for his arrest, charged with murder. Conscious of his own innocence, and having still a little spark of memory, he resolved to give himself up to the authorities, which he did. They, believing him guilty of one of the basest crimes recorded in American history, and hardly equaled in atrocity by the savages of the forest, when led on by revenge and madness, treated him in a very barbarous manner. It is true that he was chained and marched in a burning sun some twenty-five or thirty miles, to what point we are not advised—probably Paola, but certainly not Lecompton. The fatigue, burning sun, excitement and chains did not of course improve his mental condition. He continued wild with delirium, and when brought into camp with the treason-prisoners, he showed evidences of a wandering mind for many days afterwards. Yea, for months, whenever conversation turned, as it sometimes did, upon the Pottawattomie murder, and we attempted to excuse his father for that act, giving the mitigating circumstances current among Free-State men at the time, his eyes would sparkle with unwonted brilliancy, his manner would assume the wildest excitement, and in a loud and boisterous voice, which was uncommon to him on other occasions, he would exclaim: 'Do not attempt to offer anything in palliation of such a crime! Nothing can excuse it! It was unequalled in atrocity, and displayed only cowardice. Had the same deed been done in open day it would have shown more manliness; but to call men from their beds at midnight, and to cut them down in cold blood, is infinitely more savage than was the chopping in pieces, by a drunken rabble, of R. P. BROWN, at Easton.' And thus he would run on for a long time, much more vehemently than we can possibly describe, until his attention was diverted by gradually introducing some other topic, when his excitement would quietly subside.

JOHN BROWN, Jr., is a man of education, and of more than common abilities. Strictly honest and conscientious, he could not consent that the blood of any one should rest upon him or his father.

When released from imprisonment, he expressed a determination to leave Kansas and its excitements, that he might engage, in some peaceful locality, in tilling the soil, in the hope that he would forget the incidents through which he had passed while sojourning in the Territory, and that his brain might attain its equilibrium.

From this statement it will be seen that the insanity of JOHN BROWN, Jr., owed its first cause to other than the barbarity of the border-ruffians, though their outrages upon him were enough to drive one mad.

We may also state, in this connection, correcting the many statements to the contrary which have appeared in the Press, that the dwellings of the BROWNS, on Pottamattomie Creek, were not burned until after the Pottawattomie murder alluded to, and then in retaliation for the damning crime of which JOHN BROWN, Sen., FREDERICK BROWN, and their party, were guilty."

A SCULPTOR DISCOMFITED.

Mr. BRACKETT, the sculptor, who went to Charlestown for the purpose of getting a likeness of BROWN, from which to model a bust, was refused all admission to the prisoner, and he will have to return without accomplishing the object of his visit. A letter-writer says that the cause of Mr. BRACKETT'S discomfiture is "his acknowledged acquaintance with a gentleman and lady who came here a day or two ago to see BROWN, who is an old friend of theirs. This gentleman and lady were regarded with great suspicion. It is claimed as a token of 'forbearance,' even beyond that shown to Mr. HOYT, that they were allowed to depart in peace. Mr. HUNTER, the senior counsel for the Government, says that the lady was only shielded by her sex, for he has letters deeply implicating her with the conspiracy. A man in her position, he says, would have found inconvenience in getting away—would not, indeed, have got away at all."

Continued Outrages in Utah—Treasury Receipts for the Week.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Nov. 10.

Reliable information just received from Utah, states that Judges SINCLAIR and CRADLEBAUGH are on their way to Washington. Mr. HARTNELL, Secretary of the Territory, arrived here yesterday. It appears that there continue to be frequent murders and assassinations, but no arrests, as the Mormons systematically obstruct the course of justice. The opinion prevails among all the Gentiles that the courts will be useless unless the Government changes its policy. Gen. JOHNSTON is so restricted by his instructions that he cannot move to afford the necessary protection. The continuance of the army at Camp Floyd only serves to add to the prosperity of the Mormons, by means of the large sums of money spent in the Territory for supplies.

The receipts into the Treasury last week were $819,000. The reduction from the amount on hand in the previous week was nearly $125,000. The amount subject to draft is $4,741,000.

Telegraph to Nantucket.

BOSTON, Thursday, Nov. 10.

Mr. SAMUEL C. BISHOP, of New-York, has just completed an important link in our telegraphic facilities, by laying a very substantial telegraph cable, of his own manufacture, from Edgartown to Nantucket, a distance of eight or ten miles. This new line will supply a want which has been much felt by the people of Nantucket and the Vineyard, and offers important accommodations to the shipping and insurance interests of the whole country. The new line connects with the lines of the Boston and Cape Cod Telegraph Company at Edgartown.

War-ships on the Look Out for Fillibusters—Walker's Partisans in Nicaragua—Failure of Belly's Canal Project—Miscellaneous News.

From Our Own Correspondent.

SAN JUAN DEL NORTE, (Nicaragua,) Sunday, Oct. 23, 1859.

The United States flag-ship Roanoke, Admiral McCLUNEY, will, I hear, depart early to-morrow morning for Aspinwall, touching off the Colorado and Boco del Toro, (Chiriqui Lagoon,) and I therefore send you hurried details of such news as we have.

We were very much surprised by this repeated visit (on the 19th) of the flag-ship, direct from Aspinwall'—this time conveying to us intelligence of the departure of WALKER, with about 150 men, in his favorite steamer Fashion, from some place below New-Orleans, he having escaped the vigilance of the Custom-house officials, (!) and is reported to have left without a clearance.

Admiral McCLUNEY, with commendable promptness, came here, and he immediately despatched the St. Louis, Com. POOR, to anchor his ship off the mouth of the Colorado—a navigable branch of the River San Juan, about fifteen miles from the town of San Juan del Norte—within cannon-range of the entrance, and, as I am informed, with the most positive orders to prevent any steamer, or other vessel, from getting into the river without being first boarded and thoroughly examined with reference to papers, crew, cargo and passengers. The Sabine, Capt. ADAMS, it is also reported, has similar orders with respect to vessels appearing off this place.

Her Britanic Majesty's steam-frigate Valorous, Capt. ALDHAM, left here early on the morning of the 20th, and proceeded to the northward. It is possible that she may fall in with WALKER and capture him. The Valorous will search the coast as far as Cape Gracios.

The greatest excitement was thus manifested by the anticipated arrival of WALKER, and there is scarcely a doubt that he would be received here with general rejoicing, (if he could only get in,) because nothing can be hoped for from the present Government of Nicaragua. It is well known that WALKER has a large party in the country favorable to his restoration to power. Everything in the country is in the most deplorable condition imaginable,—with very little money circulating, excepting in this town, where the United States and British vessels-of-war are supplied with fresh beef, vegetables and fruits, paying "hard currency" for such supplies; and their continued presence necessitates some little business. The closing up of this once fine harbor is a great drawback to any commercial transactions, or real estate improvements; and there does not appear to be any indications of its being soon again reopened, either by natural or artificial means. A little capital and energy might accomplish so desirable an end.

The bark White Cloud, twenty-four days from New-York, arrived off here yesterday afternoon, and anchored near the old entrance. She will be towed in to-morrow by the steamer Ogden, Capt. SLOCUM, and under the pilotage of Mr. BURTON. This will be quite an event. The east end of the opening on Point Arenas—where the Transit Company's house formerly stood—appears to be again gradually filling in, and the west end washing away. There are nine feet here at high-water, in its deepest point, and eleven in the old channel.

For about two weeks past there have been five men at the mouth of the Colorado River—four of whom came here recently from New-York viâ Aspinwall, and thence by the English mail-steamer, and one is an old resident and friend of WALKER. I am informed that an officer from the U. S. ship St. Louis had an interview with the men on shore, and ascertained from them that they expected and were awaiting there the arrival of WALKER and his party in the Fashion. This declaration, and the fact of these men coming so recently from New-York, would seem to indicate the Colorado branch as the point where WALKER intends disembarking. All, however, is left in doubt by the want of some reliable information from the United States. It is currently reported and believed that WALKER had about one thousand men ready in New-York who expected to take passage here upon the mail-steamer which was to have left there on the 5th inst. with the United States mails for California, and he intended availing himself of that opportunity to throw that large force into this part of Nicaragua. If this statement should prove to be correct, it is, indeed, a most fortunate circumstance that the United States Government refused to allow those mails to leave for their destination across Nicaragua. I am certain that Admiral McCLUNEY would never have permitted such a large body of men to land here, knowing, as he did, from responsible sources, that no means of transportation had been provided to facilitate even the crossing of the mails. The most rigid investigation will be made, (as I am assured by United States Naval officers,) of every man who comes down here in a steamer, or other vessel, before being permitted to land. Such precautions are necessary, to guard against imposition and to prove the good faith and intentions under which United States officers are acting, who, one and all, are most vigilant and indefatigable (with the imperfect means at their disposal,) in the prosecution of what is right and just, not only to their own country, but to Nicaragua; for, it appears, the instructions under which they act are really so contradictory that they amount to just nothing at all—so far as the intercepting of WALKER and other "fillibusters" is contemplated! The want of two small steamers is now most severely felt by the Admiral.

He might have chartered the Laura Frances for a week or two at a most reasonable price; but then, it is said, he has no authority to do so, and should he use his own discretion, he would most probably be charged with the charter-money. The department having twice refused to send a steamer for service on this coast, the Secretary of the Navy would, no doubt withhold his sanction for the exigency which has arisen for the charter of a steamer, had the Admiral employed one.

The weather here has been most delightful for the past two months; but the season is approaching when we may expect a decided change,—heavy and continuous rains and high winds.

The small steamer Laura Frances left here yesterday afternoon for Old Providence, to procure fresh beef, vegetables, fruits and other necessary supplies for the vessels-of-war stationed here—expecting to be absent about eight or ten days. So soon as the news of WALKER's anticipated coming is received up the river and upon the lake, all supplies for this place will be cut off. The Laura Frances was chartered by our enterprising fellow-citizens, Messrs. BURTON and PERRY, of HENRY DICKSON, who, for some time past, has had possession of the steamer, (having rescued her from the rocks in the river, where she was ashore for months,) and Mr. DICKSON has kept possession of her because of the failure of her owners—in whose employment Mr. DICKSON was—to pay the wages of himself and those under his orders. I understand that Mr. DICKSON has libeled the steamer, and if he and his men are not settled with shortly, she will be sold to indemnify DICKSON for his expenses, and the wages of the men.

BELLY has, at last, officially notified his financial and commercial agent here, the Viscount DE BARRUEL DUVERNE, that he cannot raise any more money, and, therefore, his darling Interoceanic Canal project must fail! Gigantic humbug, farewell! BELLY did not make any remittance for the liquidation of the debts which he incurred here through the willingness of DE BARRUEL, nor did he say one word about their future payment.

Peruvian Invasion of Ecuador—Attempted Revolution at Valparaiso and Death of Gen. Vidaurri—Defeat of the Rebels—Miscellaneous News from Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia and Chili.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PANAMA, Wednesday, Nov. 2, 1859.

The British mail steamship Valparaiso arrived at Panama on the 21st ult., with dates from Valparaiso to Oct. 1, and from Lima and Callao to Oct. 13. She did not touch at Guayaquil, so that our dates from that place are only to the 8th. The Valparaiso brought $150,000 in specie, principally for England.

ECUADOR.

The dates from Quito are to the 1st October. The triumvirate at Quito, composed of MORENO, CHIRIBOGA and AYARZA, is regularly installed in power, President ROBLES and his War Minister, Gen. URBINA, having fled, as I wrote you in my last. It is charged that these men are ruling with an iron hand, despoiling the Liberals of their property, even entering their houses and selling their furniture under the hammer to satisfy forced contributions. They have also dissolved the Supreme Court, and committed other outrages against the people. All the country, except the province of Guayaquil, which, with Cuenca, named Gen. FRANCO Provisional President, have declared for the triumvirate at Quito.

PERU.

President CASTILLA, with his army of over 4,000 men and munitions for the invasion of Peru, arrived in twelve or fifteen vessels at Paita, from Callao, on the 6th October. CASTILLA immediately proceeded in the war-steamer Trembes to Guayaquil, where he had an interview with the Admiral of his blockading squadron, and with Gen. FRANCO, Chief at Guayaquil. This interview resulted in his immediate return to Paita, and in a dispatch to his Minister of War, as follows:

To the Minister of State, War, &c.:

SEÑOR MINISTER: Desirous of quickly terminating the campaign undertaken against the Government of Ecuador, I left the convoy at the moment of its departure from Callao, to make a personal reconnoissance, in the River Guayaquil, of the national squadron. At 3 o'clock P. M. to-day, I returned to Paita, and have thought fit to suspend military operations, for the reason that affairs have assumed such a shape in Ecuador that I do not consider it decorous to employ the arms of Peru against the different authorities which govern that country.

The Government of Gens. ROBLES and URBINA having disappeared, has been succeeded by that of Gen. FRANCO in Guayaquil, and that of a Junta presided over by Don GABRIEL GARCIA MORENO, in Quito. The division that was at Cuenca, (2,000 men,) and which was the strongest of the Ecuadorian army, has mutinied and dispersed, one party pronouncing for the Quito Junta, and the other for the Chief at Guayaquil, the balance separating for various points.

There are not, therefore, in Ecuador, any enemies to fight against, and I do not seek in any way to interfere in the public affairs of a friendly sister State. I only wish to see it prosper under a just Government, that will satisfy the proper demands of Peru, which have been so persistently refused her by the Magistrate who has, fortunately for the people of Ecuador, ceased to be their ruler.

In this state of affairs I have thought fit to order all the troops to land, in order to refresh them, to fumigate the ships, and that they may be ready in any emergency to act. The troops will be billeted in various parts of the provinces where their health, their morale and their discipline will be preserved.

A small detachment of the squadron will sail from here to Guayaquil, to afford effectual aid in the celebration of the preliminaries of a treaty which will give to Peru sufficient guarantees for the present as well as the future. RAMON CASTILLA.

The last paragraph of this dispatch probably contains the whole gist of the matter. ROBLES and URBINA are overthrown by the machinations of CASTILLA, and exiled—GARCIA MORENO, the friend of CASTILLA, who concerted with him at Lima the revolution against ROBLES, is made Chief of Ecuador, and then the "small detachment" goes to Guayaquil to uphold the hand of MORENO, while it puts pen to the treaty, the army at Paita being within a day's steaming of Guayaquil in case any further aid is necessary. How long a treaty thus forced upon a people will last, is the only doubtful question in the matter. The expedition will cost Peru a pretty penny—$250,000 per week being the expense of maintaining the army at Paita, to say nothing of the immense sum that it will take to get it back to Lima.

Señor MIGUEL CASPIO, the new Minister of Justice in Peru, has succeeded in inducing CASTILLA to liberate all political prisoners.

Peru is for the moment politically quiet, but is only waiting for a leader to commence a new revolution.

Guano, to the amount of 16,576 tons register, was shipped from the Chinchas in the month of September, viz.: 9,779 tons to England and the Continent; 2,861 tons to France and her colonies; 2,094 tons to the United States, and 1,842 tons to the Mauritius; 29 vessels in all, of which 7 were American. Rates of freights to the United States are $15; to England £3. The American bark Crusoe gets $16 to Havana; the Wanderer $15 to Hampton Roads and a market.

Exchange on the United States 24 per cent.; on England 42d.

BOLIVIA.

Dates are to the 4th October from Lucre. Dr. LINARES, the President, is sending men towards the frontier, to guard against a threatened invasion of CASTILLA, and the revolutionary plots of Col. AGREDA, who, it will be recollected, was defeated at La Paz some months since.

LINARES has issued a decree prohibiting the circulation of Bolivian money denominated arbolita, coined in late years, and with which Peru has been flooded, and allows the circulation only of that of 1820. This uttering of a sadly depreciated coin, and the refusal of Bolivia to redeem it from the Peruvians, to whom her people have paid it for goods, has for a long time been one of the principal difficulties between the two countries, and is likely yet to lead to a war. Pretty much the whole of the silver circulating medium of Peru is in this coin, the best of which is worth only about 65 cents on a dollar.

CHILI.

This Republic is again in a state of great agitation. On the 18th, the anniversary of the national independence, while high mass was being celebrated in the Church of the Matriz at Valparaiso, at which Gen. JUAN VIDAURRE LEAL, lately appointed Intendente, and an immense concourse of citizens were present, forty or fifty men made a rush upon the soldiers' arms which were stacked in the Plaza, to gain possession of them. The soldiers resisted, when several on both sides were killed. Gen. VIDAURRE left the church to quell the disturbance, but he had scarcely descended the steps when his heart was pierced by a musket-ball, and he died in a few hours after having been carried into the edifice, invoking pardon for his assassins. President MONTT, who was in the church at Santiago, when the news reached there by telegraph, immediately fled to his palace and surrounded it with soldiers, fearing a revolution.

Several military companies having immediately repaired to the Church of La Matriz, the riot was suppressed. Several of the rioters have been arrested, and two, names not given, have been shot. The greater part of them are said by the Mercurio to belong to the first circles of society. Amongst them are included Don FRANCISCO IGNACIO OSSA and his two sons, who are very influential and very wealthy. It is generally believed that this riot was the result of mature deliberation, and had its ramifications in other parts of the Republic. Gen. VIDAURRE was an old and much esteemed militaire, having commanded in the war of independence, and was the Commander-in-Chief of the force that lately suppressed the revolution of Copiapo. It is thought he was particularly marked out for his part in the Gallo-Copiapo revolution.

A decree has been issued by the Government, prohibiting the introduction of firearms, ammunition, &c.—blasting powder only excepted—without special permit. No vessel with such cargo will be permitted to remain in any port of the Republic; and arms cannot be sold without the special permission of the authorities.

Congress had terminated its ordinary session, but was to be again convoked.

Señor MANUEL OVALLE, Minister of Finance, has resigned; and Señor JERONIMO URMENETA, Minister of Foreign Affairs, has added his place to his own.

Señor CORNELIO SAAVREDA, Intendente of Aranco, having been in Valparaiso at the time of Gen. VIDAURRE's assassination, was appointed temporarily to the Intendency.

Congress has granted $50,000 to the widow and children of Gen. VIDAURRE.

Business, the previous fortnight, was duller than usual. Several failures, for heavy amounts, had taken place in the North and South of the Republic, six of which were at Serena. Creditors have obtained settlements, in most of them, at 50 to 70 per cent. on extensions of two, four, and six years. Copper and hides have obtained a small advance. Last sales copper, $19 50 cash; nitrate of soda, $1 87 cash. A cargo of Canada lumber, of 694,000 feet white pine, assorted, fails to find purchasers at $60. Flour is dull at $3 75 to $4 25 per quintal, six months. White China Sugar—16,000 arobas, from San Francisco, sold at $2 81½. American white and gray shirtings are in demand. Fine and fast-colored prints, American drills, denims, white and blue quiltings, and flannels, also wanted. In freights, the American ship Magnolia takes ores from four coast ports to Liverpool, for $3 15. The Oliver Jordan, engaged a month previously, takes ores from two ports to Baltimore, for $13. The American ship Golden Rocket goes to Cork, from two ports, for £4; if to the Continent, £4 5s.

FROM CALIFORNIA.

Reception of Lieutenant-General Scott at San Francisco — General and Miscellaneous News.

From Our Own Correspondent.

SAN FRANCISCO, Wednesday, Oct. 20, 1859.

The Overland Mail brought us positive intelligence a week ago that Gen. SCOTT was coming to California, and might be looked for on the steamer then nearly due. The news was received with marked demonstrations of rejoicing by all classes of our citizens, not only because of the pleasure they anticipated from meeting the war-worn veteran upon the Pacific coast, but also from the conviction that his report to the Government of the exposed condition of our Pacific possessions would give an impetus to the Pacific Railroad as an instrumentality of defence. Our volunteer military companies were immediately put under orders to assemble instantly upon the announcement that the steamer was telegraphed, in order to receive the General and escort him to his quarters. A triumphal arch was erected over Montgomery-street, trimmed with evergreens and hung with flags and mottoes complimentary to the expected guest. The arrival of the steamer was somewhat expected on Friday night, and everybody was on the qui vive for the "martial music on the streets," which was to be the signal for the assembling of the military companies if she should be telegraphed after dark. At about 10 o'clock on Friday evening, the fife and drum, vigorously plied by a couple of stalwart professors of the latter, and a competent "artist" in the squeaking instrument, set the town in motion, and in an incredibly brief space of time the streets were thronged with people of all classes and conditions, who began to stream towards the bay to meet the honored visitor. Judge of the excitement when the "martial music" was denounced as a hoax. If the musical professors could have been found just then, they would certainly have received an impromptu ducking, with the privilege of explaining next day how they had themselves been sold by a man claiming the marvelously proper name of BROWN, who paid them $8 each for their services "selling" them just as boldly as they sold the public.

The Golden Age did not arrive until Sunday morning, having been detained waiting for her New-York passengers until the 3d inst., at Panama, from which port she made the trip in the brief time of a little over twelve days. The news that she was telegraphed "ten miles out" spread over the City with great rapidity. Martial music was heard in the streets; the military turned out; the citizens poured out of their houses, every vehicle in the city was called into requisition, and the entire population was astir. There must have been 30,000 or 40,000 persons in the streets, so that the principal ones, and particularly those which led to Folsom-street wharf, were absolutely black with crowds.

As the steamer entered the Golden Gate, the battery at Fort Point gave a salute. As she proceeded up the bay, the guns of Alcatraz island opened, then the revenue cutter William L. Marcy saluted off Meigg's wharf, and afterwards, the steamers Sonora and Northerner, and the ship Twilight.

As the Golden Age reached her dock, she was welcomed by the huzzas of thousands of people congregated there. The General and his staff were on the larboard side of the vessel, where they received friends; but the crowd was kept off, and only a few persons were allowed to board. The General had desired to attend divine service; but finding that a demonstration was to take place, he did not leave the steamer at once, and gave notice that he would not leave until after the usual church hours, being unwilling to be the occasion of disturbing the congregations throughout the city. There was consequently a delay of several hours.

At 1 o'clock the military escort formed upon the wharf, the General landed, took his seat in an open barouche with Gov. WELLER and drawn by six white horses, and the line moved towards the city. The military companies all preceded the barouche, which was followed by a fine body of men in citizen's dress, known as the Scott Legion, and composed of Californians who, at different times, have served under the hero of Mexico.

On the route, when the barouche passed under the triumphal arch, a large wreath, which had been suspended in the centre, was dropped over the hero's body, very gracefully by a young lady, amid the shouts and plaudits of the multitudes. Throughout the course of the procession, the streets were crowded and the houses were filled with spectators. The line was a display of life and animation never witnessed here before. Monumental Engine Company fired a salute as the procession passed the Plaza. During the whole of the march, the General, who appeared in citizen's dress, seemed much pleased, and, with head bared, testified his appreciation of the honors done him, by bowing repeatedly to the admiring people.

When the procession reached the hotel the military halted. The balconies of the hotel were crowded with ladies. Gen. SCOTT and staff, attended by Gov. WELLER, Gen. CLARK and staff, mounted the balcony, where the veteran made a short speech, remarking that the reception accorded him, in its unanimity and universality, had so astonished and confounded him that words were inadequate to express his sensations. He apologized for his non-appearance in uniform by stating, that for forty years he had invariably attended divine service, and the reception was unexpected. He called the attention of the populace to the fact that their Chief Magistrate, Gov. WELLER, was present, and that it gave him great pleasure to meet with his old companion-in-arms, Gen. CLARK.

Gov. WELLER welcomed Gen. SCOTT to the Pacific in a brief speech. Gen. CLARK, in behalf of the Army, thanked the citizens of San Francisco for the generous reception accorded to the Commanding-General of the Army.

Col. E. D. BAKER, in behalf of those who had formed a portion of Gen. SCOTT's army in Mexico, welcomed the General to California.

The entire occasion proved to be one of the most enthusiastic and pleasing ovations that has ever taken place on this coast. The occasion was one of jubilee and joy. There was no afterthought or difference of opinion to mar the universal felicity of the day. Not a man in the vast crowd that thronged our streets but sympathized in the demonstration and participated in the respect and admiration for the worthy object of it. Neither did anything occur to detract from the effect of the welcome, or to tincture our remembrance of it with regret. All was orderly and dignified.

Notwithstanding the fatigue of his voyage, the General lost no time in proceeding upon his way to San Juan island at the call of duty. He sailed in the steamer Northerner on Monday, and by this time cannot be far from his destination, where, let us hope, he will speedily and satisfactorily arrange the troublesome affair, to settle which has brought him a journey of over 5,000 miles.

Gen. SCOTT was waited upon by our City Government, in a body, and by large numbers of private citizens; also, before his departure the following invitation was extended to him:

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 17, 1859.

TO LIEUTENANT-GENERAL WINFIELD SCOTT.—Sir: Your old friends, who have served under you in your various glorious battles and campaigns, desire to meet you for congratulation, and the interchange of good wishes. They do not desire to make this a public occasion, but an informal meeting of old friends and soldiers. It seems to them that, in some sort you owe it to those who have stood by you in the most perilous times as tried soldiers, brothers alike in dangers and in triumphs, to meet them as brothers, in a private and friendly way, at the domestic hearth or at the festive board. We have been appointed a Committee by the company of Veterans who had the honor to escort you yesterday, to request you to dine, en famille, with them, at such time as may be convenient to you. Allow us, in the most earnest manner, to urge you to give us all this opportunity of taking you by the hand, and in this distant land, gained by your victories—and which we made our homes—to indulge in the teeming memories of our common past, and in aspirations for your continued glory and happiness.

JOSEPH DANIELS,
late Major U. S. Q. M. D.
T. W. FREELON,
late Captain 15th U. S. Infantry.
WM. L. DUNCAN,
late Captain 4th Ill. Volunteers.

The General postponed his answer to this invitation until he shall have returned from the North. During his brief sojourn with us he made not the slightest allusion to the business which called him hither, nor dropped the least hint of his proposed policy even to his army friends. It seems to be understood, however, that independent of his duties in connection with the boundary dispute, the Government desires to get the personal opinion of Gen. SCOTT on the subject of the defence of this coast; and the old soldier, doubtless, will not only carefully examine, with his own experienced eyes, the works under construction to defend San Francisco, and other places, but will scrutinize the coast with a view to determining what other points it is necessary or prudent to fortify. Gen. SCOTT will also, undoubtedly, after a personal inspection of the country, appreciate more fully than ever before the exposed position of this State, and the necessity that exists for dispatching hither, without delay, more extensive supplies of arms and military stores than we now possess, to be in readiness in case of need.

We are in hopes also that when the General reflects upon his tedious voyage hither of over 5,000 miles, with all its incident uncertainties and transhipments, and particularly the necessity it involves of crossing a foreign territory, his military sagacity must be strongly impressed with the necessity that exists for other means of communication and transportation with the Atlantic States and California, for purposes of national defence. When he comprehends fully the wealth of California, its importance to the balance of the Confederacy in a commercial point of view, and understands thoroughly the necessity for speedy communication with the centres of population at the East, in order to enable the United States to hold this country in case of war with a strong European power, he must determine that it is the duty of the United States Government to procure the building of the Great Railroad, at all hazards and at whatever cost, and his views upon such a subject ought to be accepted as definite by Congress and the country.

SUMMARY OF CALIFORNIA NEWS.

Every day adds to the proof that the recently discovered silver mines of the Carson Valley region are among the richest of all the mines ever opened upon this coast. These are the Washoe mines, to which I have already referred in a recent letter. Only two of them have been opened thus far; but the geological indications are that the country in that vicinity is full of them. A correspondent of the Bulletin of this city—a gentleman whom I know personally, and whose statements I believe may be implicitly relied upon—thus writes:

"The fact of rich silver ores being in this locality has been known for several years; but, till a few months ago, there had been no discoveries in places which guaranteed to the explorer much encouragement, and which did away with the idea that the detached pieces were not brought by some unknown agency from some distant locality. The discovery was made by a prospector looking for surface gold diggings. Finding some mineral substance, and having business in Nevada City, he determined to bring it over for testing, and judge his surprise and delight when he found it worth at the rate of over a thousand dollars per ton! He received his assay in the evening, and in 'no time' mounted his horse and 'put' for his newly-discovered Potosi. The news flashed like lightning, and before 10 o'clock that night a party was mounted and in full chase after him. One of those individuals at the time was an 'unfortunate miner.' Not having the means to embark, he solicited and obtained the wherewithal, and to-day he can pocket $25,000 for his interest. I merely mention this fact to show how 'luck' will turn and favor the ever-buoyant and enterprising.

As I remarked before, but two mines are opened of moment, and as the rainy season is at hand, but little will probably now be done for months. In the Spring, and when they get fairly to work, the results will stagger the most sanguine.

Here now is a new field for exploration by the scientific and practical miner, and another artery from which will flow an abundance of wealth, which, as Californians, we should seek to work and retain, instead of shipping the ores, as is now being done, to European countries. There is no discovery yet made on the Pacific coast which will place us on such a solid footing, in a mineral point of view, as this. Being so closely allied to the great gold district of California, it will give weight and substantiality to both, and will impress itself so strongly on the minds of European and Atlantic mining adventurers, that, notwithstanding their past unfortunate investments, they will be for trying their luck again in our lands of gold and silver. Investments in silver mines are regarded with more certainty than gold—in fact, experience proves such to be the case; and yet, I think, so rapid is the progress in the art of saving gold, that it will, before long—and that not very long either—give the greater promise and reward of the two metals.

There seems now to exist but few doubts about the mineral richness of the country on the eastern slope of the Sierra Nevada. Gold, silver, and copper, have already been discovered over an extensive section of country. The development of the mineral wealth now known to exist in that valley will tend to hasten a Territorial organization, to be soon followed by the forming and adopting of a State Constitution. Rich silver, copper and gold mines will soon build up a new State on any Territory belonging to the United States. As may be expected, the recent rush of population to the Washoe country gives great importance to the movement for the organization of the Territorial Government of Nevada, which has been asked at the hands of Congress during the last two years. And this reminds me that the people of that section are agitating the election of a new delegate to Congress to succeed J. W. CRANE, recently deceased. Among the gentlemen talked of for the place is Col. F. W. LANDER, who has just finished his overland wagon road from the South Pass to City Rocks. The people of Carson Valley have indicated a great desire to have the Colonel accept the position and press their interests at Washington. Thus far, however, he has declined to allow his name to be used in this connection.

Among the mining items of the past week I add only the following, in relation to the Moro diggings, in the northern part of the State:

The claim of RAMSEY, BRADLEY & Co., four men, has for the past two weeks paid more than $300 per day, and part of the time $500. The claim of DODD & Co., four men, (sold yesterday for $4,000,) pays about $300 per day; and that of WATFORD & Co., $200 per day regularly since it has been opened, and there is not a claim upon which water can be obtained, but will pay at least an ounce a day to the hand.

A rumor, very extensively circulated here, to the effect that Gov. WELLER has appointed Mr. S. J. HENSLEY—President of the California Steam-Navigation Company—to the United States Senate, to fill the vacancy occasioned by Mr. BRODERICK's death, is erroneous. The Governor has not yet determined that public policy or sentiment requires any appointment, although I understand that it is not impossible that he may yet conclude to appoint in the course of the next fortnight. If so I shall not be at all surprised if he does appoint Mr. HENSLEY, who is a very worthy, but a plain, practical and substantial man, and will be likely to do the State good service while at Washington.

It has been stated very extensively in the Press, here, that Senator GWIN is opposed to any appointment to fill the existing vacancy, and that he prefers to represent the State alone in the Senate this Winter. I understand that Gov. WELLER will soon cause a letter to be published by a third party, who is witness to the fact, showing that Dr. GWIN, before starting for Washington, earnestly urged the necessity and propriety of a Senatorial appointment, controverting earnestly the Governor's then declared opinion that an appointment would be quite unnecessary. Among the passengers by the steamer which carries you this, are Gen. JOSEPH LANE, United States Senator from Oregon; Judge DEADY, United States District Judge from that State; and Hon. J. C. BURCH, member of Congress from California.

The Probate Court has under advisement the motion for the appointment of an administrator on the estate of the late Senator BRODERICK. A. J. BUTLER, who was for a long time attached to the person of the deceased as a sort of confidential friend, (some say Instrument,) testified as follows, in support of the application: "I know something about the estate of Senator BRODERICK; it is located in this city and county, consisting mostly of real estate; the personal estate is very little over $500, his real estate I deem worth $150,000; the money value of the monthly rents are about $400; some of it is loaned on rent, payable in improvements; it is encumbered by mortgage; I know Mr. COLTON, the person applying for administration; deem him a competent person to take the charge of the estate; I am also acquainted with Mr. BROWN; I deem Mr. COLTON a responsible person, worth from $60,000 to $80,000; his relations with Mr. BRODERICK were of the most intimate kind."

It is stated that the amnesty to political offenders, recently promulgated by the French Emperor, includes all such in any portion of the world; and in accordance with it the French Consul here is prepared to give passports to any in California desiring them. Many who had given up all hopes of seeing their native country any more, will now be able to visit La Belle France in safety.

BAYARD TAYLOR—the poet lecturer—leaves us today on the steamer for the East. At the close of the lecture in this city on Tuesday evening, he delivered a very pretty, though hastily written original poem, addressed to the tutelary genius of California, which I inclose.

On Monday last a little boy of Mr. ISAAC LEVY's aged 22 months, fell from the balcony of his father's residence on Stockton-street, sustaining such severe injuries that he died on Tuesday.

On the 11th October, D. W. HUNT, formerly of Sacramento, had his head crushed in an arrastra at Gentry's Gulch quartz mill, Mariposa County. He was hourly expected to die of his injuries. HUNT was Sheriff of Sacramento County a few years ago.

A colored man, 40 years of age, named J. LEFFRIDGE, and a native of Massachusetts, was yesterday sent to the Insane Asylum at Stockton.

Alphonse Kalndler, a highly respected French merchant of this city, died on Tuesday morning.

A curious and remarkable phenomenon is reported by one W. S. DEAN, who having recently returned from Honey Lake, says that extensive sheet of water has literally dried up. Susan River, a respectable stream, and as full as usual at this season of the year, fails now to reach the basin of the lake, sinking into the earth far above it. Immense quantities of fish have been destroyed by the event, and now lie decaying on the deserted bed. It is remarkable that a lake twenty miles wide and forty miles long should thus suddenly disappear.

JOHN W. TRASK, a young man from Vermont, committed suicide in the United States Hotel, at Marysville, on the night of Sunday, 16th October, by cutting his throat with a razor. The Marysville Express says:

"TRASK had been at the hotel for several days, sick with a kind of intermittent fever, and Sunday evening a servant took him something to eat, after which he was in his room until the next morning, when he was found lying dead on the floor, saturated in his own blood. Upon examination it was found that his throat was cut almost from ear to ear, severing both jugular veins. It appears that he got up out of bed, stood before a wash-stand, took the razor, cut his throat in the horrible manner described, and then laid the razor on the bed. The whole of the front part of his clothing was covered with blood, showing that he must have stood erect a short time after the act was committed and then have fallen on the floor. He was a young man highly respected by those who knew him. No trace was left to indicate the cause of the rash act, but it is supposed it resulted from a depression of spirits, as he had been very unfortunate in business, and was left in a very dependent condition. He had been in California four or five years, and most of the time had been engaged in mining. He lived, at different times, at Iowa Hill, in Plumas County, and in Oroville. Recently he had been in the employment of Mr. WILCOXEN, the Clerk of Sutter County. He had on his person $3 50, and a small sum, about $100, was due him from some person in Oroville. A day or two previous to his death he wrote a note to Mr. WILCOXEN, requesting him to call and see him. Mr. WILCOXEN did so, and came over on Monday morning to have him taken to Yuba City."

Another suicide was nearly effected in our City Prison yesterday morning. F. ALTON WHEELOCK, a young man from New-York, I believe, was convicted a few days ago of forgery, and remanded to jail to await sentence. Yesterday morning a fellow-prisoner in the same cell discovered him suspended by the neck from a bar of a grated window, for which purpose he had used an ordinary pocket handkerchief. His room-mate took him down, when WHEELOCK fell to the floor, where he lay for some time quite unconscious. He has since quite recovered. WHEELOCK is quite a respectable-looking young man, but is either a finished rogue or a crazy man; I don't know which.

Mr. ALFRED BOREL, an importer of jewelry in this City, who arrived here in the Golden Age, has got into some trouble with the Custom House authorities. The collector had been informed by the overland Mail that BOREL would attempt to evade the payment of duties upon a lot of diamonds. An officer, accordingly, boarded the steamer as she entered the harbor, and found a small casket in Mr. BOREL's possession, containing 27,000 francs worth of diamonds, which he had brought from Paris to New-York, and thence to California. These were seized. Mr. BOREL denies any intention to smuggle, and offered to enter the goods at the Custom House, and pay the duties. He admits that he brought the property through New-York, but says he arrived on the Persia, took the California steamer within twelve hours, and had no time to make the entry before leaving New-York, supposing, too, that he could do it, just as well here. The technical crime, however, is clearly made out by the failure to enter the diamonds at your port.

GEORGE GILMAN, ex-police officer, who was convicted of the manslaughter of Capt. S. S. RUSSELL, at the Walton House, and sentenced some months ago to ten years in the State Prison, has been pardoned out at the earnest request of a large number of our citizens, including the Judge, Jury and District-Attorney, who tried him, and who have been led to doubt whether he really deserved the severe punishment meted out to him.

Two convicts named W. H. SANDERSON and FRANK PERKINS, alias Red Horse, were pardoned out of the State Prison, a few days ago. They were both shot, in the first outbreak at the prison, in an attempt to get back to the gate, not being participants in the escape. Both were seriously wounded.

JANE NEWELL has been divorced, in this city, from HORACE NEWELL.

The trial of JOHN JOY BARMORE, for the manslaughter of PETER KEEFE, has been set down for Nov. 7.

OREGON AND WASHINGTON.

Our advices from the Columbia and Willamette Rivers are to the 11th inst.

The people of Port Townsend, on Puget Sound, were quite elated with the prospective establishment of direct trade between that port and Japan. The ship Iconium, Capt. HEUSTIS, arrived at that port on Sept. 30, from Japan, with a cargo of rice, tea, silks, and various articles of Japan manufacture. The Iconium will return immediately to Japan with a cargo of lumber. Capt. HEUSTIS, before his departure, will make the requisite arrangements for the establishment of a permanent direct trade between Puget Sound and Japan. It appears that the wood of Japan, China and Australia is unfit for building purposes,—hence the probability that our Northern neighbors will be able to drive a fine trade with them in timber.

A report that the Administration had approved of HARNEY's conduct in the San Juan matter had reached that Island and caused much rejoicing there.

Mr. PARKER, lately arrived on the Columbia, from Salt Lake, states that he passed on the route, west of Salt Lake City, some five thousand immigrant wagons, of which at least one-third were destined for Oregon and Washington Territory. There was much inquiry by the immigrants as to the prospect for settlement on Puget Sound. Mr. PARKER represents the valley of the Walla-Walla as full of immigrants, having good American cattle and horses, and plenty of them. He estimates at least eight hundred immigrants as settled in that valley—about twenty families as having taken claims on the Yakima, thirty in the Clickatat, and all through the country, from the Dalles to the Simcoe reserve. At least 250 wagons had arrived east of the Cascades, in Washington Territory. Some 300 wagons were at the Grand Ronde, some of the immigrants being in a starving condition. Col. WRIGHT, commanding at Fort Walla Walla, had very timely and generously come to their assistance, and sent forward two hundred and fifty sacks of flour, fifty barrels of pork, and other necessaries.

Capt. WALLEN's Fort Benton and Salt Lake Wagon Road party and command reached the Grande Ronde on the 30th of September, in 24 days march—easy stages—from the valley of Great Salt Lake. The distance from the ferry on Bear River, in that valley, to the camp in Grande Ronde is 460 measured miles, thence to the mouth of the Umatilla it is estimated to be about 63 miles, making the distance from Bear River to a navigable point on the Columbia 523 miles, or 29 days travel at 18⅓ miles per day, with water, grass and wood at camping intervals.

The last of the emigration was with Capt. WALLEN, consisting of 9 men, 4 women and 15 children. It has been ascertained that 446 men, 115 women, 148 children, 187 wagons, 206 horses and mules, and 1,898 head of cattle have passed over the road into this valley this season. These emigrants appear to have had remarkable success with their stock, as Capt. WALLEN has seen the remains of but fifteen or twenty by the roadside.

The command will reach the Dalles by the 18th or 20th inst., making short marches. The dragoon horses, which have marched about 1,900 miles, are represented as looking well; the mules in fair order, too.

The Steilacoom Herald has the following in regard to the Boundary Commission, in reference to whose movements Mr. BUCHANAN seems to feel some anxiety now-a-days. It is evident that if the President don't get his dispatches, the newspapers are more fortunate. The Herald says:

Correspondence dated Camp Skagit, 27th August, says: "After some experience of life on Fraser River, I have found my way to the camp of the Boundary Commission. The Commissioners have been getting along swimmingly this season. They seem determined on making up for lost time, and will undoubtedly reach Colville or its vicinity before Winter sets in. Lieut. PARK (the working man of the expedition) and Mr. GARDNER, astronomer and surveyor to the Commission, left our camp on the 1st instant, for Okinagan, escorted by sixteen men of Company F, Ninth Infantry. The party reached Capt. ARCHER's camp on the morning of the thirteenth day after starting. After a sojourn of one day with Capt. ARCHER, the party again put back for this camp. The object of the tramp was to select a trail for a pack train as near as possible the 49th parallel. Lieut. PARK was highly successful in the undertaking, and found a trail whereby a train can be put through from the Skagit to the Similkimeen River in six days. It has always been thought impracticable to cross the mountains along this line; but, notwithstanding all the difficulties, Lieut. PARK has overcome them, and succeeded in finding a first-rate pack trail. By this short cut the expedition will be able to reach Colville at a much earlier period than was expected.

The intelligence of the San Juan difficulty, which reached us a few days ago, has created quite a sensation in our little camp, and is the only topic of conversation by the camp fire. Of course, all are of one opinion as to who has the best right to the island in question; and the prompt action of Gen. HARNEY in occupying and protecting American citizens on the island has created great enthusiasm for the stout-hearted old General. Our camp presents quite a lively aspect this morning, as we are all prepared to start for Okinagan."

Steilacoom is growing rapidly, and building is the order of the day. One building is scarcely completed before half a dozen others are started. Everybody is pressed into the service, and even the merchants are compelled to assist in the erection of their own buildings by mixing mortar and carrying the hod.

The establishment of woolen factories on Puget Sound is strenuously urged.

At the Dalles a divorce has been granted in the case of JOSEPH S. RUCKE

CRITICAL.

THE WORKS OF WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE. The Plays Edited from the Folio of 1623, with Various Readings from all the Editions and all the Commentators, Notes, Introductory Remarks, a Historical Sketch of the Text, an Account of the Rise and Progress of the English Drama, a Memoir of the Poet, and an Essay on his Genius. By RICHARD GRANT WHITE. Vols. 6, 7, 8, comprising the Histories. Boston: LITTLE, BROWN & Co.

There are, of course, innumerable editions of Shakespeare, more or less pretentious, from the magnificent folios and quartos which adorn only a nobleman's bookshelves, or the alcoves of a stately library, accessible under difficulties to the curious and studious, down to the dingy, marginless misprint which is sold for two dollars, and whose only office, as to any point of debated interest, is to make the darkness visible. Between these, there are various readable and respectable editions, with some man's comments, or some other man's, or with a wiser nakedness of annotation. That there remained still a want, however, has been abundantly admitted by the repeated attempts to satisfy it. The very best edition, in a reasonably accessible form, it was certain had not yet appeared. And the critical changes and elucidations, which, in every successive edition were attempted, afforded evidence further for the apprehension that the best material for such a popular edition was not yet at the disposal of editors.

It has seemed to us, if we may risk so presumptuous an opinion, that an American editor has some advantages, in an effort to supply this demand, above his more eminent European competitor. The freshness of his position in a stirring progressive country," is something. Who knows what curious, persistent, prying quality that may give to his mind? The wonderful talisman of practical common sense is in his hand, while he presses on, unimpeded by too much veneration for antiquity and precedent. There is a veneration which paralyzes independence and defeats strength. To the English editor, the laborious rubbish—we make a clean breast of the word thus early—which confronts him, mountain high, is little less than holy land. He stands in awe of it, and speaks under his breath. His pick-ax rings feebly against the mass. Surely—he begins to think—these are the everlasting hills. And with reason; for, consider what trains of gigantic Celts and other have successively shot the rubbish of their long life-work, barrow after barrow, on this tremendous heap. But however hopeless the task, all that fearful weight lies upon our SHAKESPEARE'S breast. It was well meant, but at last it hides him from our view. With some right desire to recover and bring again to sight his godlike face and form, many have laboriously set themselves at work to pick away the mountain piece by piece, but, as we said before,, either with an insuperable veneration for their pre-laborers, or a misapprehension of their true vocation, which has wasted their efforts and frustrated their design. It has needed some one from another sphere, with a different education—without fear of Oxford, of JOHNSON, WARBURTON or COLLIER; with independent thoughts and opinions—to advance, with fearless steps, from Nature's side to SHAKESPEARE'S hand.

The work had become hopeless in England. Anything like a reasonably accurate likeness of SHAKESPEARE, except that general view of his proportions which nothing could intercept, because it was itself larger than every other object, could not be expected.

An examination of the three volumes which continue Mr. WHITE'S edition of Shakespeare confirms the estimate which we had formed of the great value of this edition, and of its adaptation to the necessities of the case. They comprise the historical plays; the comedies were published several months since, and the tragedies are forthcoming.

The first characteristic which directs the attention, is the marked independence of the editor This is manifest as well in the form and arrangement of his work, and in his treatment of the opinions of others, as in the expression of his own views and thoughts. We are pleased to perceive, however, that this independence, which at once attracts our respect and confidence, is not offensively maintained. For the respect with which the opinions of other editors are treated is equally marked. In numerous and unavoidable conflicts of opinion a true knightly courtesy is displayed and we have yet to discover an instance of unfairness and ungentlemanliness, even when referring to the most obvious absurdity and anility—o which, it cannot be denied, the works of Shakespearian editors furnish numerous examples. We are next impressed by the congeniality and docility of the spirit in which these investigations are conducted. The meaning of the bard is sought with a tenderness of touch, a gentleness and reverence which impress us as honestly related to a generous and chivalrous heart. Proceeding further, resourceful common sense is indicated at every step. In this respect, it may be, a majority of SHAKESPEARE'S editors are more deficient than in learning, persistency or any other qualification, except geniality. And these two—geniality and common sense—are the original, we may say, moral qualifications, without which, in a work like this, any degree of courage, laboriousness, zeal or learning will be of little use. Before this, we should have already noted in the editor a remarkably critical acquaintance with English literature, particularly of the Elizabethan era, and that of the cotemporary European nations. In respect of tact in the accumulation and management of the materials for criticism, Mr. WHITE is to be highly credited. While such learning takes time, and no life is long enough to exhaust it, there is a great difference between scholars in this respect. A genial young man, who has enough of that kind of genius which CARLYLE characterizes as consisting in an "uncommon faculty for doing a great deal of work," to carry him through the reading which is necessary to give a facility in any department of literature; may be a better educated man and better critic than a formal, stupid octogenarian who has read twice as much. In fact this is the difference between the genial critic and the driving "Dry-as-dust," not in a greater amount of labor, but of perception and tact. Finally, not to enumerate more particularly, we are impressed with the unusual thoroughness of investigation which marks the examination of doubtful questions in these volumes. There is no haste or sparing of pains; and this is particularly evinced by general dissertations on important critical and historical points which exhaust the questions treated, and place them at least presently at rest.

This thoroughness comprehends and includes every department of the work, even to its mechanical structure and finish; so that the result is the most beautiful set of volumes ever published in this country. They are of small octavo size, very compact and elegant; the exact average for the library, the table, and pocket being attained. The paper and typography are charming and even luxurious; while the fair and ample margin refreshes the eye, and the entire absence of meretricious ornament satisfies the taste. The very titlepage greets you like the open front of some men in which you see, Gentlemen! written by Nature's hand.

The labor which has gone into these beautiful volumes, and which makes no special appeal to the attention, will never be conceived by one in thousand of their readers.

"Editors of Shakespeare,", says MR. WHITE, "who faithfully perform their duty, have one claim upon the gratitude of his readers which is very great in proportion to the show of it than can properly appear in editorial notes and essays. Their approach to him lies not over a beaten track, or through the inviting luxuriance of healthful though uncultivated nature. The arid wastes and fetid sloughs of an effete and long-abandoned literature stretch round the base of the eternal hills kept ever green and beautiful by his perennial genius; and these must be explored by all who would worthily assume the office of guide to those invigorating heights on which the world finds mental health and happiness. But of this weary pioneer-work the visible results are comparatively very small—a clearer view here, a firmer foothold there, a new beauty revealed, the path to an old one disencumbered, or a source of pure and ever-springing pleasure discovered in a foul morass or stony barren; it is only to such results of his toil that the editor of Shakespeare has the right to direct attention."—King Henry IV., Part I., Introduction.

Almost every "Introduction" by which the historical plays are preceded furnishes an example of these laborious but unnoticed toils, as well as of the peculiar qualities which mark the mental processes and style of the writer. Upon the latter we add that the vigorous, simple and clear English-idiomatic diction of the original papers in these volumes, will certainly commend them to the reading of scholars, however opinions may differ as to the views expressed. For how difficult it is to write with clearness and reasonable intelligibility, not to say interest, upon points of particular and intricate literary criticism, where the names of authors, disputed dates of writing, publication and representation, competing claims of authorship rendered madly incapable of solution by malignity, mendacity, stupidity and all manner of obfuscation in time past and present, beset the baffled editor in solid phalanxes of conflicting tones, no mortal can know except he upon whom the gods have laid the task to do it.

The Essay on the Authorship of King Henry the Sixth is so fine a specimen of critical writing, and so characteristic an example of Mr. WHITE'S style, that we should be glad to quote largely from it, and rest there the character of the whole work. It occupies, however, more than sixty pages, and its unity should not be disturbed. It relates to one of the most interesting subjects of uncertainty in the works of SHAKESPEARE; and investing an intricate argument with a simple and severe yet attractive style, determines the whole matter beyond a reasonable question. It will be remembered that the strong likeness and in fact identity of a considerable portion of the second and third parts of Henry VI., with two plays called respectively "The First part of the Contention betwixt the two Famous Houses of York and Lancaster," and "The True Tragedie of Richard, Duke of York," has constituted a ground of serious doubt that SHAKESPEARE was actually the author of Henry VI. It is supposed that MARLOWE, or GREENE, or perhaps others, were concerned in the composition of the two plays just mentioned; but it has not before been known that SHAKESPEARE, then a fortune-seeker in London, about the year 1589, had an important hand in them, too; his aid being probably more highly appreciated than paid by those well-known playwrights.

Starting from the known fact that about three thousand lines of these old plays are found transferred bodily to the pages of Henry VI., and that a large number besides are used in a modified form, the gaps being filled by new matter, Mr. WHITE, arguing differently from WARBURTON, HALLAM, MALONE and DYCE, establishes the fact that SHAKESPEARE, far from practicing plagiarism, merely transferred from their disreputable companionship in these plays, the parts which were of his own composition. This is established by a comparison of their merit with the best passages of the acknowledged works of MARLOWE, GREENE and PEALE, in both the heroic and comic departments. The passages which were left untouched by SHAKESPEARE in the old plays, after being contrasted with those which he took, are then compared with the known writings of these playwrights, and are found curiously identical with the latter in badness of style—their style having marked and characteristic faults by which it is as unmistakably removed from the strength and grace of SHAKESPEARE'S diction as are the famous melodies of Mother Goose. But we crave pardon of the venerable nursery songstress, for who knows how much SHAKESPEARE himself may not have derived from her rythmical tintinnabulation? We are here tempted to quote a fine passage upon the traits of authorship:

> "In deciding the identity of authorship, as in proving the personal identity of men, it is upon minute traits that we are obliged finally to rely. Weight, figure, complexion, eyes and hair—the very voice, may be sufficiently alike in several men to deceive all but the most acute and practiced observers, and to make it impossible for even them to establish a proof except to one another. But little blemishes or beauties, whether congenital or accidental, inveterate habits, and trifling tricks of speech—these, when stronger traits have failed, by their presence establish, or by their absence disprove, identity, as far as that is possible. It was Prince Hal's trick of the eye and foolish hanging of the nether lip that betrayed his paternity. And so it is in literature. Mr. DICKENS might write a tale—a short one—without either humor or pathos, and in which an exaggerated character or description could not be found; Mr. THACKERAY might compose a few pages—a very few—infelicitous in style, and with a tendency to beget a trust in human nature or one hope for it; but neither could lay aside certain of those habitual turns of expression, which are to a writer as Daniel Doyce's unconscious use of his thumb was to him, or even as the movement of the involuntary muscles is to all men."
> Essay on the Authorship, p. 431.

Uniformity of Characterization of the transferred passages with those which were newly added to them in King Henry Sixth, is lastly adduced as an evidence of SHAKESPEARE'S authorship. This we think deserving of more weight in the argument, than Mr. WHITE gives it: "For it is manifest," says Mr. WHITE, p. 449, "that if it were desired (and it plainly would have been desirable) to preserve a seeming, as well as a nominal identity in the prominent personages common to the historical plays presented at the same period on the same stage, the characterization of a later work might easily be made to correspond with that of an earlier." Yes—by a Shakespeare; though that might not be material, if the earlier passages had been of small merit, or feeble individuality. But when their thoroughly Shakesperian vigor and strength is remembered, the consideration of their continued characterization in the subsequent passages assumes importance.

By the force of Mr. WHITE'S argument, MALONE, who has given more space to this question of authorship than any other editor, and who believed that Henry VI. was not composed, but only "altered and enriched" by SHAKESPEARE, goes to the ground without remedy or rescue.

A great interest attaches to this question, because if the hand of SHAKESPEARE was in these two old plays, of which fact Mr. WHITE leaves no ground of doubt, it was his "prentice hand." How wonderful was his genius, which at no time of his life seems to have been immature, but even in this period of his boyhood started forth in panoply like the goddess from the front of Jove. None of the later works of the immortal bard afford stronger sparks of the "faculty divine" than were stricken from his mind by these early, flinty attritions. Among instances of proof, we might adduce those mighty lines which commence the cruel speech wherewith Queen Margaret taunted the captive York:

> "Come make him stand upon this molehill here,
> That raught at mountains with outstretched arms,
> Yet parted but the shadow with his hand."

This is no place for an essay upon the genius of the mighty Poet, but the facts established by Mr. WHITE in this paper, suggest a range of inquiry into the capacities and prerogatives of genius, both novel and interesting. For genius asserts itself, and then we are only to mark what it does; it will not observe our laws, but will make laws for us. Even as one said of the greatest of warrior-statesmen,

> "The ebbs and flows of his single soul
> Were tides for the rest of mankind."

Our space forbids detailed reference to the valuable "Introductions," which, under that modest title, infold in almost every instance the critical disposition of important or interesting questions concerning the dates, originating motives, spirit and genius of the plays, with much else. At the same time, with a forbearance as commendable as it is unusual, and which as much as any other quality indicates the fitness of the Editor for his work, Mr. WHITE refrains from the expression o any opinion other than is implied in the exegetical, historical, or philological explanation which the case demands. We should be glad to refer to the Introduction to Richard II., which is remarkable from the method of close analysis of cotemporary writing—somewhat peculiar to himself—by which the Editor settles the date of the production of this play, but limited space forbids. A characteristic instance of acuteness occurs in the Introduction to Henry IV., Part I., whereby the idea of this incomparable work is traced to an old play entitled, "The Famous Victories of King Henry the Fifth," and the embryo of the perennial Sir John is found in a saying of Sir John Oldcastle.

> "When Henry V says—(in the 'Famous Victories')—'My lads, if the olde King, my father, were dead, we would be all Kings,' Oldcastle replies, 'He is a good olde man, God take him to his mercie the sooner.' In degree, the wit of this answer is as unlike Falstaff's best sallies as the spark from a leyden-jar, that can hardly be perceived in a dark room, is unlike the playful flashes of heat lightning that illuminate all the heavens with their harmless blaze; but in slight and purely Falstaffian. Its easy impudence, its light and careless treatment of a serious subject, its jocular masking of an utter and inhe ent selfishness, its delicious non sequitur which yet seems a sequitur, its manner of 'wrenching the true cause the false way,' are the characteristic traits of the fat knight's humor; and I have little doubt that this single line is the germ, which, impregnated, unconsciously perhaps, by Shakspeare's life-giving genius, became in its final development the most mirthful creation of all imaginative literature."—Henry IV., Part I., Introduction, p. 227.

The original folio of 1623 is taken by Mr. WHITE as the standard, it being assumed that the readings of that edition are more nearly authoritative than those of any other. They are, therefore, unhesitatingly restored in every instance, except in cases where a manifest misprint has occurred. Few intelligent students of SHAKESPEARE will find fault with this adherence to the oldest complete edition, which probably was compiled from revisions of the stage copies made by the poet himself, or by those who, like BEN JONSON, knew him, and had opportunities for a correct judgment which no future editors could possess. A considerable number of Mr. WHITE'S notes relate to such restorations. An error of editors has been to attach too much importance to the greater antiquity of the quartos with a disregard of internal evidence and the manifest spirit of the poet in favor of a rigid, wooden construction, exceedingly characteristic of automatical scholars. The character of these quarto pamphlets, disfigured with stage directions, interpolated with actors' "gags," maimed by eliminations, and deformed with excrescences suggested by policy or dictated by popularity, and the moral certainty that SHAKESPEARE, in his calm and ripened years, did correct, restore and rebeautify his works, have been blindly overlooked by many editors. Blind men must follow the wall—we cannot blame them for that. The result of a great deal of severe editorial labor in a discrimination of this sort may be seen in the present revision of "Richard III.," of which, perhaps, the text has been more corrupted and obscured than any other of SHAKESPEARE'S plays. We quote a few notes from this and from others:

> "'——to wolves, to spiders, toads':—Thus the folio. The quartos have 'to adders, spiders, toads,' which has been adopted in all modern editions hitherto, generally without notice, but sometimes with the remark that the folio has 'wolves' for 'adders,' and that the next line shows that the quartos give the true reading, because wolves are not 'creeping things.' If the folio had merely 'wolves' for 'adders,' this reasoning would be good, if not conclusive; but it has 'to wolves, to spiders, toads, or any creeping venom'd thing,' &c., where the repetition of the preposition cuts off the connection which would otherwise exist between 'wolves' and 'creeping venom'd things,' which refers only to spiders and toads. The change seems clearly to have been made, upon the revision of the play, for the purpose of giving the passage variety of thought and rhythm."—Note to Richard III., Act 2, Scene 1, pp. 274, 275, Vol. VIII.

In the previous quotation a passage is restored upon a sharp verbal criticism, which, once pointed out, is obvious and unquestionable. In the following, a restoration is made upon a higher but equally certain ground—that of consistency of characterization—of which Mr. WHITE has frequent instances, and in which—among systematic editors of Shakespeare—he is almost alone.

> "'—— down Fates':—thus the folio; the quarto has 'down faters,' which some commentators, Mr. DYCE among them, disregarding Pistol's predilection for 'the Sisters three,' accepts as an irregular spelling of 'faitours'—vagabonds, calling attention to the absurdity of coupling dogs and Fates. But this absurdity is eminently Pistolian. Mine Ancient should, perhaps, have said 'faitours;' and so, just below, he should say 'Hannibals,' but he does say 'cannibals,' and also alludes to a kind of Greek not mentioned by HOMER. He also makes a slight mistake in elevating Cerberus to regal honors; and, considering the creature's qualifications to wear a triple crown, it is a wonder he did not call him Pope Cerberus. Under the circumstances, 'Fates' may stand."—Note to Henry IV., Part I., Act 2, Scene 4, p. 544, Vol. VI.

A large number of the corrections of the folio are so obviously required by sense, taste and euphony, that we are at a loss to perceive how they have been discarded by editors, unless upon the supposition that they were ignorant of them. With some hesitation—as Mr. WHITE is treating us to many novelties—we are disposed to hazard the conjecture, on our part, that some of the most noted Shakespearian editors have omitted, in very many cases, to compare their work with the original folio. It is our impression, from a careful observation of Mr. WHITE'S notes, not only upon the Histories, but upon the Comedies, which have already appeared, that a complete and thorough comparison of the quartos with the folio, sentence by sentence, has never before been made. If it had, how, in the name of common sense, could such notes as the following have remained to be written?

> "'The which if I perform and do survive':—All the quartos read: 'The which if he be pleased I shall perform,' and have hitherto most strangely been followed by all modern editors, in most cases without remark, one merely copying the other. But Mr. COLLIER (and Mr. SINGER after him) says, 'The change [from the quartos] was considered necessary in consequence of the substitution of heaven for 'God' in the preceding line.' But no such necessity existed; for 'he,' in the quarto line, might as well have referred to 'heaven' as to 'God.' It does so in numerous instances in these plays, and in cotemporary literature. [See: 'For as we under heaven,' &c., 'so under him,' &c. —King John, Act iii., Scene 1.] The reading of the folio is fully sustained, if not made imperative, by the alternate clause of the sentence, three lines below, where Prince Henry says: 'If not, the end of life cancels all bonds.'"—Note to King Henry IV., Part I., Act 3, Scene 2, p. 406, Vol. VI

Yet our current editions of SHAKESPEARE swarm with such passages as these, in which the quarto readings are retained in spite of the text of the folio, preferable for rhythm, euphony and thought, aside from the authority."

But in some cases a just discrimination makes it necessary to reject the folio text. These are generally, as before stated, cases of misprint. They have occasioned a number of very instructive notes; while indeed some are very obvious.

> "A woman-General! what should we fear!'—the folio has 'A woman's General,' &c., which has hitherto been retained, and, I believe, without question. A General is to be feared for his ability and the force under his command, whether he command under a Queen or a King; and Queen Margaret, a woman-General, took field instead of her feeble husband. The misprint, easily made is easily discovered."—Note to King Henry VI., Part III., Act II., Sc. 2, p. 119, Vol VIII.
> "'—the hour of death is expirate:—i. e., is expired; the quartos having, 'the limit of your lives is out.' The folio has, 'is expiate.' SHAKESPEARE uses 'expire' in a similar sense again in Romeo and Juliet, Act I, Sc. 4, 'and expire the term of a despised life;' and his fondness for the preterite termination in ate is apparent in nearly every one of his works. He uses 'festivate,' 'combinate,' 'conspirate,' 'confiscate,' 'contaminate,' &c.; but in giving the verb this formation, he never omits a radical letter, and in this case r is, next to p, the most important element of the word. For this reason we must attribute the occurrence of 'expiate' here and in the twenty-second sonnet,—'Then look I death my days should expiate' (read expirate,)—to the likeness between 'expirate' and 'expiate,' and the seeming fitness of the latter word in its proper sense to both instances. MALONE, strangely thinking that 'expiate' could mean expirate or expired, although its only possible meaning is to atone for impious by pious deeds, retained it; and it held its place in the text until the appearance of Shakespeare's Scholar, since when Mr. SINGER has adopted 'expirate.' Mr. DYCE adheres to the old word. STEEVENS suggested that 'perhaps we should read 'expirate.'"—Note to Richard III., Act III. Sc. 3, p. 292, Vol. VIII.

A large class of notes, with which the previous may be included, relates to conjectural emendations. It is probable that opinions may vary in this department, as they always have, and that some of the readings proposed by Mr. WHITE will be questioned. A broad field of remark is here opened, upon which we do not propose to enter further than to say that the combined geniality and common sense displayed in the emendations which are peculiar to this edition, fortified often by critical comparisons and references, evincing equal acuteness and learning, commend a large majority of them to cordial acceptance. We have no doubt that many will be generally adopted. Of these the following is an average example:

> "'——To become passionate: i. e., to become lachrymose, plaintive. 'Passion' and 'passionate' were commonly used in this sense; as 'Ariadne passioning for Theseus' perjury.' Two Gentlemen of Verona, Act. IV., scene 4; 'She is sad and passionate at your Highness' tent.' King John, Act. II., scene 2; 'Give me some sack to make mine eyes look red; for I must speak in passion.' 1 Henry IV., Act II., scene 4. The old copies read, by a sort of misprint not uncommon even at this day, 'To be compassionate,' and the slight, but important error, not having been hitherto detected, this reading has been perpetuated by editor after editor, except Mr. SINGER, who, most inappropriately, reads, 'To be so passionate.' The others are obliged to make 'compassionate' mean, complaining—an altogether unexampled and unwarrantable use of the word."—Note to Richard II., Act I., Scene 3, p. 251, Vol. VI.

The subjoined note, taken almost at random from a number which we had marked, illustrates various peculiarities of this edition, and we believe are new:

> "'Gave their free voices'—The folio, by an easy [illegible] has been resorted to the desperate expedient of substituting a semicolon for the full-point of the original after 'voices,' and supposing that 'sent' in the next line is understood after 'have' in this, (i. e., all the clerks, &c., have their free voices sent; Rome, the more, &c., hath sent.) That only the learned clerks should have their free voices is plainly absurd; although those who have not accepted MALONE'S violent misconstruction, have been obliged to accept the absurdity. But we know that nearly all the learned clerks in Christian kingdoms gave 'their free voices' for Henry's divorce (the decisions of eight continental faculties of law and divinity, to that effect, are given in Hall's Chronicle,) and therefore Wolsey may well say, 'Who can be angry now?'"—Note to Henry VIII., Act II., Scene 2, p. 440, Vol. VIII.

A singular fatality seems to have attended SHAKESPEARE'S text, as respecting the folio of 1623. Many of these notes show us, that while its undoubtedly genuine readings have in a multitude of cases been discarded or kept out of the subsequent editions, almost every error of corruption that chanced to creep into it has clung to the successive issues with the tenacity of original sin. This is illustrated by the preceding as well as the following note:

> "K. Rich. Catesby!
> Cate. My lord? Thus the quartos, with a slight variation in the second prefix, presently to be noted. In the folio, the King calls, 'Ratcliff,'—a mistake in which it has been followed hitherto. The error was caused by a trifling misprint in the quartos, in which the abbreviated names used as prefixes to the speeches of these characters are Cat. and Rat., so that the printing of R for C gave the reply to Ratcliff. To correspond with this, some one who had to do with the folio, either in the printing-office or before it went there, made the King call Ratcliff. But whoever was commanded by the King to 'send out a pursuivant-at-arms,' most certainly went out and did it immediately; and we know from Richard's speeches afterwards, both in quartos and folio, that Ratcliff remained behind. Both quartos, and folio too, have the stage direction, when the King retires, 'Exit Ratcliff,' only. It was Catesby, therefore, whom Richard sent out for a pursuivant; and the quarto gives us the correct reading. The omission to mark the exit of Catesby is a defect too common to require notice."—Note to Richard III., Act. V., Sc. 3, pp. 309, 310, Vol. VIII.

If any one thinks that some of the notes which thus illustrate and correct minute defects, are too critical or of small importance, let him reflect how essential to the clarity of the text these corrections become, when the occasions of them are multitudinous. It is like cleaning an old picture; the successive specks which have fallen upon it were singly unnoticeable, but in the aggregate they obscure the painting, and they must be removed—perhaps with a needle point—as they fell, one by one. Let the objector further observe what an evidence of thoroughness in the editor such observations furnish, and what guarantee they give of trustworthiness in more important questions; while it is also remembered that an edition of Shakespeare should be not only adapted to general and generalizing readers, but to that possibly unfortunate but very well-defined class who are even hypercritical, and cannot bear a speck upon their mirror.

Notes of a philological character are not infrequent in this edition, many of which will be new to most readers. Of this kind is the following:

> "'——The old beldame earth:'—The prefix bel, meaning ancient, far removed, or venerable, was in common use of old, it having been adopted from the French. 'They shew the graven and peyncted arms of theyr aunscestors; they speak of theyr graundfathers, great graundfathers, bel-graundfathers and great bel-graundfathers, whereas they themselves stand like blockes, in a manner less worth than those peincted signes which they glorie in.' The Praise of Folie, Englished by Sir THOMAS CHALONER, 1549. Sig. I. 'Beldame' is the only remnant of this usage. It probably originally meant 'mother-in-law, (Fr. beaupere, father-in-law, belle-mere, mother-in-law,) and hence the opprobrium which it finally came to convey."—*Note to Henry IV., Part I., Act III., Sc.*1, p. 203, Vol. VIII.

The true lover of SHAKESPEARE will unite with us in commendation of the judicious arrangement of the notes in this edition—being at the end of every play, and leaving the text unmarred and unincumbered. SHAKESPEARE'S words, as nearly as possible, restored to the very form in which he uttered them, are placed upon the fair page—and nothing more. If the student finds changes from the form with which he was familiar, or allusions which are still obscure, he may look, if he will, among the notes at the end for help. Five volumes more will complete the work, which we cheerfully recognize as being, in important respects, the best edition of SHAKESPEARE hitherto published.

Another Fire in New-Orleans.

FIFTY-FOUR HOUSES BURNED—FIVE HUNDRED PERSONS HOMELESS.

From the New-Orleans Picayune, Nov. 4.

One of the most disastrous conflagrations which it has fallen to our lot to record for many years, took place, yesterday, in the Fourth District. More valuable property has before been consumed by a single fire; but perhaps for 20 years, by no single disaster of the kind, have so many families been rendered destitute, or so large an area been swept over by the devastating element. Not less than 54 houses have been destroyed, and more than 500 people are left shelterless, having lost their all—furniture, clothing, stock and provisions.

The fire commenced about 2½ o'clock P. M., in the stables of J. B. FITCH, situated in the rear of his property, which fronts on Washington and Chippewa streets. When first discovered, the flames were bursting out in all directions from the stables, the whole building being enveloped with fire. Mr. FITCH was absent from home, and had no workmen or servants whose business required their presence in the stables. At the time he left, in the morning, he had only two mules and his carriage-horse in the stables, the balance of his stock having been removed down town in the neighborhood of his contracts. The doors of the stable were not locked and access was easy, from Chippewa or Washington streets, to them. The fire seems, therefore, to have been the work of an incendiary.

Before the firemen reached the scene in any considerable force the fire had made considerable headway, and it was evident that it was of a very dangerous character. As the engines arrived they found no water with which to combat the destructive element. The only resource was the half-filled cisterns that were only sufficient to keep a machine in operation for a few minutes at a time.

In about half an hour the fire spread from Chippewa to Laurel, moving with great rapidity up town with a terrific blaze two squares broad. For the distance of two squares the cinders, with which the air was filled, falling upon shingle roofs, lighted the combustible material, and buildings were temporarily saved only by the greatest effort. The entire area from Washington on the line of Chippewa to the upper side of Ninth-street, was burned over, and from Sixth to Ninth only a smoking desolate ruin is presented, seven and a half squares having been destroyed.

The scene of the conflagration beggars description. The poor sufferers, in eager haste having removed their household stuff to the streets, directly found themselves between two walls of flame, and were driven away from their rescued goods, which were destroyed in many cases on the highways.

It was impossible, in the confusion attendant on such a scene to obtain a list of the sufferers, or to do more than to designate the extent of the disaster by a description of area burned over.

GRAIN—Wheat has been in active request, chiefly on speculation, at rising prices. Sales have been reported of 60,000 bushels, including prime White Michigan, at $1 50; prime to choice red Western, (Winter,) in small lots, at $1 32@$1 34; fair to choice Milwaukee Club, at $1 14@$1 16; Racine do., $1 13; fair to choice Chicago Spring, at $1 10@$1 12 ₱ bushel. LUMBER—The demand has been good, at previous quotations. In Albany, a brisk inquiry has prevailed during the week, and desirable lots have been freely purchased. The Albany Evening Journal states that "The stock is fast going out of market, and from present indications there will be but little desirable styles of lumber left over for the opening Spring trade. The great bulk of the recent arrivals have been very green, and but little more dry lumber will be received this season. Hemlock continues scarce, and spruce is not plenty. Dry inch-and-a-quarter pine, upper qualities, and black walnut, continue scarce and in active demand. The high rates now ruling on the canal tends to limit shipments, and we learn that a large amount of lumber has already been piled up at Buffalo, from the utter impossibility of shipping it, owing to the scarcity of boats. Vessels continue in active request for the East and South at a further advance of 12½c.@25c. ₱ M. to the former ports. There is a large amount of lumber on the district awaiting shipment. We quote freights to New-Haven, $1 87½ ₱ M.; Hartford, $3; Providence, $2 25; Boston, $4; Baltimore, Washington and Richmond, $3; and to New-York, $1@$1 25, an advance of full 25c. to the latter port. The receipts by the Erie and Champlain Canals, from the opening of navigation to Nov. 8, in the years named, were as follows:

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The Hungarian, of the Portland line, having touched at St. Johns, N. B., yesterday, furnishes European advices to the 2d inst. They are of importance. Napoleon III., it is reported, has addressed a letter to the King of Sardinia in reference to the Italian question, inviting the unconditional assent of the Court of Turin to the arrangements outlined at the Villafranca interview. The leading requirements are said to be the restoration of the Grand Duke of Tuscany and of the Duke of Modena; the annexation of Parma to Piedmont; the submission of the Romagna, and the introduction generally of moderate ameliorations, as the prelude to an Italian Confederation. The developments furnished by fuller details of this startling correspondence, will be awaited with profound interest. It is understood that England will participate in the General Congress. Count Karolyi had been sent to Zurich to replace Count Colleredo. The portfolio of the Interior in France has been resigned by the Duke of Padua. From Spain, we learn that the expedition against the Moors was prepared to sail, and it is definitely announced that France will not cooperate in the war.

The City of Baltimore, which arrived here yesterday morning, did not leave the port of Queenstown until the 28th ultimo, and telegraphic advices to that day are received from London and Liverpool. Particulars of the wreck of the Royal Charter have been made public. Nearly five hundred lives were lost, under the most distressing circumstances. It is expected that the gold on board the lost vessel—about half a million sterling in value—will be recovered. The gale in which the Royal Charter foundered was the severest that has been known for many years on the British coast. Several other vessels were wrecked, and much property, both on land and at sea, was destroyed.

The political news by the City of Baltimore is of considerable importance. The Spanish delaration of war against Morocco is confirmed, and the Spanish Consul at Tangier had struck his flag and left. Spain is receiving energetic support from France, and the relations between that Power and England are daily growing more uncertain. The opposition of England to the proposed European Congress and the old Suez Canal dispute, have drawn from the semi-official Constitutionnel an article of a decidedly menacing character. The only new feature in Italian politics is an address of Garibaldi to the Neapolitans, who, we are assured, are on the eve of rising in rebellion.

From late Chinese advices we learn that Mr. Ward had left Peking. He could not obtain the ratification of the treaty at the capital; but the act was effected by commission at Pe-Hoang. Mr. Ward, on the 12th of September, was at Hong Kong.

The South American news received by the Atlantic, whose arrival from Panama was announced in a portion of our yesterday morning's edition, is of more than usual interest. President Castilla, of Peru, had set out with 4,000 men and 15 vessels to invade Ecuador. Their first rendezvous was at Paita, and, while there, the President proceeded to Guayaquil to reconnoitre. He found the country without any army or legitimate authority, and so utterly disorganized that, as he himself says in his dispatch home, it would be indecorous to employ arms against so helpless an enemy. The Government of Robles and Urbina had disappeared, and the principal division of the Ecuadorian forces had mutinied and dispersed. Under these circumstances, Castilla, much to his credit, refused to interfere in the public affairs of a sister State, and resolved to conclude a treaty with Ecuador, and return in peace to Lima.

The generally tranquil republic of Chile has been disturbed by a rebellion, or, more correctly speaking, a riot in the Capital. In an émeute between citizens and soldiers, Gen. Vidaurre, a prominent officer, was unfortunately killed. The disturbance appears to have been easily suppressed; but it is regarded as another illustration of the increasing unpopularity of President Montt.

The intelligence from New-Granada is of an unimportant character. The revolution at Carthagena continues to live, and threatens to become general if President Ospina does not resign, or adopt a more popular and less sensible line of policy. The loss of the American bark Rienzi, of Boston, is reported.

Our advices from Central America are later than those previously received. San Juan de Nicaragua is said to be deserted. Trade is extinct there. Several American war vessels were in the offing on the look-out for fillibusters; but it is not likely that their active intervention will be needed. Our Central American correspondents agree in declaring that a large portion of the Nicaraguan people favor the return of Gen. Walker—preferring his military despotism to the wretched inactivity that now prevails throughout the Republic.

Vidaurri is still at Roma, in Mexico, preparing for a campaign against the Liberals.

Secretary Hartnett arrived in Washington from Utah Territory on Wednesday. He represents the state of affairs in the Territory as deplorable in the extreme. Murders continued to be perpetrated with alarming frequency. The Mormons systematically obstructed the operations of the courts, and the opinion prevailed among the Gentiles that resort to them would continue to be useless unless the Government changed its policy.

The letter of our San Francisco correspondent, received by the Atlantic, describes the reception of Gen. Scott in California. The General arrived out on the 17th October, and was honored by an enthusiastic welcome. On the following day he left for San Juan Island, to undertake the duties to which he had been assigned. The recently discovered silver mines in Carson Valley were proving to be the richest ever opened. There was nothing new in regard to the Senatorial question.

The event of the New-York election is still shrouded with doubt. A calculation made at Albany last evening, with fuller returns than had been received here, placed Gen. Leavenworth, the Republican candidate for Secretary of State, 285 in advance of Mr. Jones, the Americo-Democratic candidate. This state of figures is wholly inconclusive, and further reports must be awaited to determine who is the victor. The Evening Journal still reckons, but with diminished confidence, upon a complete Republican triumph.

In New-Jersey, the election of Mr. Olden, (Opp.,) is assured. The Legislature, however, is in the hands of the Administration; the one Independent Democrat elected from Hunterdon, and a Straight American from Camden, holding the balance of power, and sympathizing with the regular Democrats.

The trial of Cook, the Harper's Ferry insurgent, was closed at Charlestown on Wednesday. Notwithstanding the utmost efforts of his counsel, the jury rendered the verdict, guilty of murder and of exciting insurrection, and the Court overruled the prisoner's bill of exceptions. Yesterday, the Court sentenced him, with Green, Coppick and Copeland, to be hung on the 2d proximo. It is thought the sentence in regard to these four will be executed; but hopes are entertained that Brown will be respited, until the meeting of the Legislature. The insanity of Hon. Gerrit Smith proves, as was apprehended, to result from the Harper's Ferry affair. In his ravings, he is said to allude to nothing else, and to believe himself under arrest.

The Treasury receipts last week amounted to $819,000, and there is now $4,741,000 subject to draft.

By the way of Charleston we learn that the Mississippi Legislature was organized on Tuesday. The Governor will be inaugurated on the 21st inst.

A resolution was submitted to the Board of Aldermen, last evening, directing the Comptroller to advertise for sale the privilege of running a ferry from Battery-place to Staten Island. It was referred. So was a communication from the City Inspector urging the adoption of an ordinance for the prevention of the throwing of garbage into the streets. Resolutions redistricting the Seventh, Eleventh and Thirteenth Wards were adopted, and an ordinance providing for the appointment of an inspector of steam boilers was made the special order for Thursday next. The Board made a further appropriation of $5,000 for "water pipes and laying" under the direction of the Croton Board. The Comptroller sent a communication to the Board of Councilmen, stating that the expenditures on City accounts, and upon the several trust and special accounts, from Jan. 1 to Oct. 31, amounted in the aggregate to $14,771,522 64.

The Governor, in compliance with the joint request of the Court and counsel, has reprieved Quimbo Appo until the 24th of February next. This is to enable the case to be taken to the Court of Appeals, to test the power of Courts of Oyer and Terminer to grant new trials in such cases. Appo was to have been hung to-day.

The Second Day of the Schiller Centenary Festival was worthily observed yesterday by the Germans of the City and its suburbs. At the Cooper Institute, orations were delivered by W. Cullen Bryant, Esq., Hon. Judge Daly, and Drs. Schramm and Wiesner. In the evening, the Academy of Music was crowded by an audience anxious to witness the representation of Schiller's "Camp of Wallenstein" by the artists of the Stadt Theatre, and a series of striking living tableaux, illustrative of remarkable scenes in his dramas, and incidents in his poems. The festivities continue to-day, and will conclude to-morrow night.

Dr. John H. Wilson, a practicing physician and druggist, was committed to prison last evening, by Alderman Brady, in default of $10,000 bail. He is charged by his wife, Mrs. Mary Wilson, with attempting to murder her by administering chloroform while she was asleep.

The Stock Market, yesterday, was higher, by ¼ @ ½ cent., for the Western Road Shares, nearly all descriptions of which were in demand. There was a concession of ¼@½ cent. on New-York Central, which brought forward buyers to the extent of 5,000 Shares. The State Stocks steady, with only a moderate demand. It is understood that the popular vote of Tuesday sanctioned the new State Loan of $2,500,000, for settling the floating Canal and other liabilities of the New-York Treasury. Money continues in easy supply. The Exchanges steady.

The sales of Flour reached 24,850 bbls., against receipts of 26,935 bbls. The demand was, in part, from speculators. Low and medium brands, especially of State, were dearer. A brisk inquiry prevailed for Spring Wheat, which was firmer. Corn and Oats are in demand, at higher prices. Rye and Barley were heavy. Rio Coffee, Cuba Sugars, Rice and Lumber were in good request. More activity was apparent in Provisions. Hay, Hops, Metals, Naval Stores and Oils were generally quiet. Cotton was purchased to the extent of 5,000 bales, including 3,500 bales in transitu, at previous quotations. Other branches of trade were essentially unaltered.

Napoleon and Italy.

Another magnificent flash of darkness falls to-day, from the telegraph, upon the Italian question. We are informed that the Emperor Napoleon has addressed a letter to the King of Sardinia, in which he urges Victor Emanuel most earnestly to join him in realizing the bases of the peace of Villafranca. In this alleged plea for his peace, the French sovereign is reported to have said that "France demands the restoration of the Duke of Modena, the enlargement of the Tuscan States under the sceptre of the Grand Duke Ferdinand, and the annexation of Parma to Piedmont."

We need hardly remind our readers that the speed of the telegraph sometimes outruns the progress of events, and that absolute dependence is not always to be placed upon its latest information. It is possible, therefore, that this Imperial letter and its contents may have no existence without the brain of some enthusiastic Paris or Turin correspondent of the London Press, and that the Emperor Napoleon may have done nothing more positive in the way of epistolary eloquence than to represent afresh to his Sardinian ally the diplomatic difficulties by which he finds himself surrounded. Such a representation would be easily enough expanded by the eager caterers for international gossip to the full and urgent political programme set forth by the telegrams. Or, it may be, that the French Emperor has resolved to make a last effort at vindicating his loyalty in dealing with Austria, and may have called upon Sardinia in good faith to indorse his pacific and provisional agreements with Francis-Joseph. Should no favorable response follow from the Court of Turin, the Emperor may fairly declare that he has done all that lay in his power to bring Italy over to his way of thinking; and that he must, therefore, leave the task of finishing what he and his army began, entirely to the Italian people. That he should contemplate anything like an application of force to the sentiments of the population of Central Italy, is not only in itself irrational, but is also expressly contradicted by the phraseology of the arrangement entered into between the two Emperors at Villafranca.

In this arrangement it was expressly stipulated that "the Princes who have remained neutral in this conflict, or who have been recalled into their possessions, must understand the necessity for immediate reforms." Not a hint is here given, it will be observed, of "restorations." The Central-Italian princes are to be "recalled," if they return to their thrones at all. This recall must be the free-will work, too, of the Italian States. There must be no imposition of incapable Stuarts or fat-witted Bourbons upon a reluctant people. At the same time, it must not be forgotten that the terms of this Villafranca agreement do not fit a solitary member of these royal and princely families, so summarily ejected from their snug Italian quarters. Not one of these little sovereigns, not even the Duchess of Parma, that "daughter of France," abstained from supporting the Austrian cause in the recent struggle. One after another these apes of royalty declared against France and Sardinia, and one after another they were compelled to seek safety in flight. To reëstablish these princes, such being the circumstances of their exodus, would be to draw the sword against the liberty of Italy, and in defence of rights which only exist by virtue of the hated treaties of 1815. To recall them is another matter; but this can only be done by the deliberate vote of the people of Central Italy. Which of all these sovereigns then can Napoleon think it necessary to Europe to see restored? Is it the Duke of [illegible] representative of the Royal Dynasty of Great Britain, condenses in his own character the worst qualities of his worst ancestors. He has never rooted either himself or the House of Este in the Italian feeling. His Duchy was one vast and dingy jail. He looked upon Metternich himself as a Liberal, and, driven from Modena in 1848 by the people, he came back beneath the banners of Radetzky, to wield justice by courts-martial, and power by the headsman's axe. For the house of Bonaparte, for France and for Napoleon III., this little image of English James II. entertained and expressed the profoundest contempt. He used to assure his courtiers that "nobody in Europe but the Duke of Modena understood the art of government," and that the French Emperor was an odious snob.

These flattering views of Francis V. have been published in full in Paris. Is it for their sake that we are asked to believe that "France demands" the restoration to his throne of their accomplished author? In one aspect the return of Francis V. might possibly be welcomed by his people. When he fled from Modena, at the sound of the French trumpets, this skillful "ruler of men" packed up and carried with him all the best pictures in the national galleries, and all the wealth of the national museums. These treasures the Modenese would no doubt be content to receive again at his hands.

The young Grand Duke Ferdinand of Tuscany was at least a more honest and open enemy of his own people and of France. But does France wish to see him replaced on his father's throne because he fought her armies at Solferino, or because he tried in vain to make Tuscan troops bombard the Tuscan capital?

But whatever explanation may be eventually given of this singular story of Napoleon's letter to Victor Emanuel, we may at least rely upon it that neither the Italian people, nor the heroic King who has put himself so bravely at their head, are likely to be wheedled or terrified into acquiescing in arrangements which would hopelessly sacrifice all that the history of the last three months has done for Italy—not in the way of substantial freedom alone, but also to fortify the world's confidence in her administrative capacity, and to develop her own national self-respect.

Fernando Wood for Mayor.

A correspondent remonstrates against our intimation that Mayor Wood will have the support of the great body of contractors and other jobbers in City work, for the Mayoralty. He urges with warmth that nothing has ever been disclosed to connect Mr. Wood, directly or indirectly, with any of the schemes by which the City was swindled during his administration—and he protests, therefore, against these indirect aspersions upon his character.

We beg our correspondent to understand that we have never attributed to Mr. Wood any personal participation in any of the jobs by which dishonest speculators have preyed upon the City Treasury. He is a man of wealth, and his besetting sin is ambition rather than avarice. Whatever might be his personal inclination, he would scarcely jeopardize his political prospects by periling his reputation for common personal honesty. But this has nothing whatever to do with our statement that he will have the support of men who are interested in jobbing operations, whether he himself is supposed to have any personal connection with them or not. This class of persons wield a prodigious power in the control of our City politics. Its members have a direct pecuniary interest in bringing about such a result as will prove most conducive to their purposes,—and they can very well afford to expend time, money and personal effort for the accomplishment of their plans.

Mr. Wood, as a practical, sagacious politician,—quite in the habit of carrying a point upon which he sets his heart without any over-fastidious scruples as to the means of doing it,—is not at all likely to overlook the influence of this class;—and we have just as little doubt as we had before the receipt of "T's" communication, that he will enlist them as a body vigorously and effectively in his support. Indeed, we believe that, as a matter of fact, the most active partisans of his election are from this very class of politicians. They may have no pledge from Mr. Wood of his countenance and favor in the prosecution of their schemes, but they expect it none the less. They understand very well that Mr. Wood acknowledges the claims of party service,—that he gives the fat things within his gift to those who follow his fortunes, and make themselves most useful in the achievement of his purposes. And as between him and any man of high-toned honor whom the Opposition may put in nomination, they would find no room for hesitation as to the course which their personal and pecuniary interests would prompt them to pursue.

The community at large recognizes fully Mr. Wood's executive ability, his vigor and energy of character, and a familiarity with the wants of the City, which would qualify him to make one of the most efficient Mayors we have ever had. But the public is equally unanimous in distrusting his official integrity, and in believing him ready at any time to sacrifice the public welfare to his personal and political ambition. Unless this conviction can be rooted out of the public mind, he will receive very little support from the more intelligent and responsible portions of the community.

Still as we said yesterday, if they divide their support, as they are very likely to do, Mr. Wood will secure but little for their votes. He will have enough of his own to secure the result. Two years ago, although he was the regular nominee of the Democratic Party, the union of the Republicans, Americans and disaffected Democrats upon Mayor Tiemann, gave him the victory. He has discharged the duties of his office honestly, ably and serviceably for the City. He has disappointed politicians of all colors, and under the circumstances of the case this was unavoidable. But we doubt if any man in his place could have done much better. If the opposition to Mr. Wood could unite again upon him, or upon any other able and acceptable candidate, they could secure his election. Otherwise, in our judgment, Mr. Wood's success is reasonably certain.

Gerrit Smith's Insanity.—The intelligence of Gerritt Smith's removal to the Lunatic Asylum at Utica, seems to be established beyond reasonable doubt. The Evening Post makes the following statements concerning an alleged family tendency to this disease:

"Mr. Smith is said to have an hereditary predisposition to insanity. His father, Peter Smith, though he possessor of an immense estate and surrounded by every circumstance of prosperity, was subject to fits of profound despondency, during which he was under the impression that he would die a beggar. Unlike his noted son, he was exceeding sharp in his bargains and money affairs. It is also said that the late Peter Skeen Smith, the brother of Gerrit, was for some time an inmate of a lunatic asylum, though [illegible] was generally regarded as in possession of his reason. Gerrit Smith has lost all his children except one, the wife of Col. Miller, of Peterboro."

This obscuration of a noble character, whether it prove permanent or temporary, is a melancholy close of a strange career. Mr. Smith is a man of the kindest and most benevolent impulses, of strong and acutely logical intellect, and of marked integrity. But he lacked practical common sense, was credulous to the last degree, and wholly devoid of that robust personal courage and strength of character essential to useful action or even successful endurance. With the family predisposition as a basis, he has doubtless been hurried into the crisis of his disease by the affair at Harper's Ferry, and especially by the extent to which his own name has been connected with it. His career in Congress indicated an utter inability to resist personal pressure:—and a vivid apprehension that he might be personally involved in the penal consequences of this invasion, has undoubtedly proved too strong for his unbalanced mind. He has evidently been frightened into insanity.

John Brown's Pardon.

The pardon of Brown has been urged upon Gov. Wise by two classes of persons—Abolitionists, who desire it from sympathy with the man and his crime, and the Anti-Abolitionists, who desire to deprive that mischievous fraternity of the damaging stimulus of his martyrdom. It was scarcely to be expected that the interference of the first class would have any other result than to aggravate the panic and augment the general disorder of the Virginia mind. But it was hoped that the advice of the conservative portion of the Northern people, based, as it was, exclusively upon friendly feeling for the South, and an earnest wish to allay the Anti-Slavery agitation, already so perilously ripe throughout the country, might be met in a corresponding spirit by the parties most directly concerned.

If the leading organs of Southern opinion are to be regarded as authority, every consideration of expediency in connection with this affair is deliberately cast aside. The Southern public has been thrown into a state of irrational and senseless alarm by this paltry invasion at Harper's Ferry, which it is very difficult to understand or conceive in the Northern States. And Gov. Wise and his partisans in Virginia seem determined to play upon this panic for the promotion of their political ends, and for his own elevation to the Presidency. It is to be used as the great engine for sweeping away all Southern toleration for moderate sentiments on the Slavery question, for ending all thought of accepting Mr. Douglas as the Presidential candidate, and for rallying the excited political feeling of the South to the most ultra and extreme demands. It seems sad that there should be inability anywhere to see the disastrous tendency of such a course, and that personal ambition should so far overbear patriotism as to permit any public man openly to enter upon it. The Richmond Enquirer has distinctly proclaimed its purpose to feed the flame of Southern excitement with all the "fuel" which ultra-Abolitionism may supply, and then leave the responsibility to the Northern States. This equals the wisdom of the man who, living near a powder magazine, makes a fire on the spot, out of the tinder which others may send him, and then throws upon them the responsibility of the explosion.

Since the South resents thus insanely the suggestions of Brown's pardon, we trust they will be discontinued. That he has fairly forfeited his life, no one doubts. We certainly have never uttered a word against the essential justice of his sentence:—the only ground on which we have advocated commutation of his doom has been the great public good which seemed to us likely to result therefrom. If those whom it was likely to benefit reject the offer, we have not the slightest disposition to press it. Brown himself has no special desire to live, nor do we suppose his life would be of any special service to the world. His crime merits death, and he has personally no claim to mercy. But we can tell the South that Brown on the scaffold will do them more damage, and involve them in far more peril, than a hundred Browns at large in the Northern States.

A Questionable Service.

There are various ways of assisting people in affliction, but the mode adopted by the Virginian authorities of soothing the sorrows of the citizens who were wounded at Harper's Ferry, certainly has the advantage over any other we have heard of in point of originality. Cook, Brown's Lieutenant, has made a full confession of his sins, twenty-five foolscap pages in length, implicating, it is said, Dr. Howe, of Boston, and Frederick Douglass, late of Rochester; and this document is about to be published in a pamphlet form for the benefit of Samuel C. Young, who, whether in advancing or retreating is not stated, received a wound at the battle of Harper's Ferry.

Nothing can be more just than that a criminal's avowal of his enormities should be made to minister to the necessities of those whom he has injured; but we regret to say that we fear in this instance Mr. Young will not be greatly benefited by the sale of Mr. Cook's great work. In other words, it seems to us that its sale will be somewhat limited. If the author had had it ready for publication the morning after the fight, and it had forthwith been committed to the care of an enterprising house, it might possibly have run through several editions in a few days. Or even if it had been furnished to the Fifth-avenue Vigilance Committee in time for use in their manifesto, those gentlemen would doubtless have paid a handsome sum for the copyright. In either case Mr. Young would have profited by it. But at this moment we are afraid the market for this species of literature is overstocked. Most readers are heartily sick of Old Brown's enterprise, and certainly do not want to go back upon it, and begin at the beginning once more. The Virginia Press has kept us so well supplied with intelligence about the plot and its ramifications, that we really have no stomach for another syllable. If Cook's confession tells us nothing more remarkable than that Dr. Howe and Fred Douglass were implicated in the conspiracy, we don't believe many people will pay anything to learn how their connection with the plot came about. In other words, nobody here cares whether they were or not. The fact, if it be a fact, possesses no sort of significance. So much the worse for them both; but we must say we never heard of a worse basis for commercial speculation than the knight-errantry of these two personages. Douglass has, moreover, seriously damaged the sale of the pamphlet by his departure for England. The only way we know of in which this individual could now be made to help its sale, would be by a demand from Gov. Wise upon the British Government for his extradition. The certainty of its meeting with a refusal would make it all the better as an advertisement.

Congressional Debates.

Congress will find itself, next session, deprived of the old desks whereon members were in the habit of writing their correspondence and composing various addresses and articles of consummate nability. The Nation will henceforward supply each of its legislators with a seat and nothing more, and he will have to rely upon the inspection of his own legs, the contemplation of the surrounding objects, or attention, to the proceedings of the House, to enable him to wile the dull hours away. He may listen to the person speaking, or not, as he pleases, but write he cannot. If this little change had been effected at a cost of five thousand dollars—as we believe it might have been—instead of eighty thousand, we should like it better; but whatever the expense in money, it still has our most unqualified approbation.

To the old desks we owe the all but total loss in Congress of the manly art of debating. They deprived every speaker of a chance of being heard or replied to by those around him. The audience was always engaged in the transaction of its private business, and the consumption of public stationery; so the orator not unnaturally prepared a speech for the millions out of doors, diffuse, prosy, elaborate, admirably adapted for the perusal of farmers in lonely districts on Winter nights, but, to anybody who had to listen to it, torture intolerable. As nobody did listen to such discourses, except on rare occasions, there was no inhumanity in delivering them. The orators knew what they were about, and so did the auditors, and both afforded each other unlimited facilities for following their own bent. The speech in Congress was a mere matter of form, and everybody knew it. As the desks enabled the members to pass the time without listening, they ceased to exercise any supervision over the speech-makers; and as the speech-makers knew they would not be heard, be their oratory ever so good, they ceased to take any pains to be either captivating or convincing.

The result has been that, as we have said, the art of debating has disappeared from Washington. As the speeches are generally intended for circulation out of doors, to be read and referred to, not to be heard, or to take effect on the spot, there is no necessity for saying so much in a short time, for saying it concisely or sharply, for making a happy hit at an opponent or his arguments, for overthrowing him with an illustration, confounding him by a quotation, or raising the laugh against him by an anecdote. When a speech is simply a dull pamphlet it is impossible to reply to it, except in another dull pamphlet. This power of ready reply is acquired, in a large degree, by practice. More than practice is of course required to make a skillful parliamentary debater. The highest excellence is necessarily based on a large fund of general knowledge, on varied reading, wide experience, thorough familiarity with the subject under discussion, and a keen appreciation of parliamentary human nature. But without practice even these are useless, and in Congress under the desk régime, practice was impossible. The consequence has always been, that when unlooked for incidents break in upon the usual dull routine, and political opponents are brought face to face, and driven by passion or necessity into saying their say on the spot, repelling or making a charge, or replying to an argument, we are, in nine cases out of ten, treated to that inevitable resort of excited stupidity—a torrent of billingsgate. The members rise one by one, laboring under emotions which, perhaps, need the readiest wit and fiercest tongue to do them full justice, but which were often forced to vent themselves in a few "names," and, perhaps, a threat of personal chastisement. More than two-thirds of the disgraceful scenes which occur in Congress every Winter, are due to the want of facility on the part of the members in dealing with an opponent off-hand and without preparation. When a man's tongue is tied, and he is greatly enraged, he generally resorts to epithets and blows.

The exciting nature of the topics which now occupy a large portion of the attention of both branches of Congress, render it doubly necessary that skill in intellectual fence, in verbal controversy, should take the place of dexterity with the pistol and bludgeon. If the removal of the desks contributes anything towards so desirable a consummation, and we believe it will, the change is certainly a blessing.

Willful Mischief Making.—The Richmond Enquirer has entered deliberately on the work of making as much mischief, and creating as much ill-feeling as possible between the North and South, out of the affair at Harper's Ferry. It reprints every Abolition fulmination it can find in the Northern Press, with the avowed purpose of "ministering fuel," in its own words, to the flame of Southern excitement. It copies the call of the Abolitionists of Boston, signed by Garrison and Wendell Phillips, for the public observance of the day of Brown's execution, and represents this as a specimen of public feeling in the Northern States. The following paragraph illustrates the temper of the paper, as well as the amount of common sense enlisted in the task of editing it:

"Now, brother fire-eaters, you who preach to us Compromise with the 'abominable heresy' of squatter sovereignty, lest we should shock the Anti-Slavery sympathies of the North, what say ye? Equal justice to all, is our motto. If we compromise with squatter sovereignty, we must make a similar compromise with Ossowattomie. For squatter sovereignty is the worse and more dangerous traitor of the two. And worst of all is the forked-tongued traitor, Compromise. Yes, verily, and when John Brown is hung, there shall be two additional scaffolds erected by the courage, and fidelity and conservatism of Virginia. Squatter sovereignty shall hang from the one, and Compromise from the other, until the Charleston Convention shall pronounce the emphatic words, 'dead! dead! dead!'"

The military exploits at Harper's Ferry seem fairly to have addled the brain of the Virginia editor. If the spirit he evinces now shall survive until the meeting of the Charleston Convention, and influence to any considerable extent the action of that assembly, it is not at all difficult to foresee the result of the Presidential election.

The Displacement of Capt. Meigs.—Upon receiving notice, from the Secretary of War, that he had been displaced from the Superintendence of the Public Works at Washington, Capt. Meigs communicated the fact to the workmen in his employ, expressing his regret at being compelled to sever their connection, and thanking them for the steady, faithful and effectual assistance they had rendered him during the past seven years. Mr. J. C. Harkness responded to the address, reciprocating fully his expressions of friendship, and assuring him of their lasting regard. Whatever may have been the reasons for his dismissal, Capt. Meigs seems to have secured and retained the cordial respect and esteem of all who have been associated with him in his great work.

Correction.—The communication in yesterday's Times, upon the Future of Italy, and erroneously signed "An Italian," was written by an American gentleman of ability and high position. We make this correction to explain passages in the article which could scarcely have come with any propriety from a foreigner.

The New York Times [illegible] the authenticity of the letter addressed to John Brown by a Quaker lady. We can say to the Times that Brown's letter was penned into this office in the handwriting of Boston Atlas.

We are at a loss to see how the assertion of the Atlas is to amend our incredulity in reference to the Quaker letter. The letter of Brown is doubtless genuine, even though elicited by a paltry forgery. There are in it too many traces of his decided mental characteristics to admit of a doubt of its authenticity.

Amusements.

Academy of Music.—Verdi's exceedingly successful opera of the "Sicilian Vespers" will be played here to-night for the third time. The performance will, undoubtedly, be the best we have yet heard.

Wallack's Theatre.—Buckstone's famous drama of the "Wreck Ashore" (why so called it would puzzle a Philadelphia lawyer to divine) was produced here last night. It is one of the best melodramas ever written by the experienced dramatist to whom it owes its paternity, and has kept the stage for so many years that it deserves to be regarded as a standard work. Mr. Wallack's company is, of course, equal to any play of this peculiar school, and we may here add that first-class artists are not thrown away on melodrama whatever the said artists may think to the contrary. The public will regard it as an especial treat and favor that a company so excellent as that at Mr. Wallack's has been thrown into a play which, under ordinary circumstances, would find its interpreters in a very different class of actors.

The interest of a revival like this is mainly in the acting, the play itself is known to every frequenter of the theatres. All the best artists of Mr. Wallack's admirable little establishment were in the cast, and the result was of course a success. Mr. Lester Wallack impersonified the bold Grampus, and gave an exceedingly picturesque rendering to the part of that interesting ruffian. In the last act he was remarkably fine, approaching with much skill the legitimate confines of tragedy. Mrs. Hoey was the Alice, and gave an intensity to the dramatic meaning of the part far excelling its intrinsic merits. The great scene of the second act was rendered with thrilling naturalness. Miss Gannon supported Mrs. Hoey with all the sunshine that her part should evoke. Mr. Blake was the Marmaduke Magog, and exerted himself admirably, although with some deficiency of the low comedy humor that has heretofore been regarded as the characteristic of the village lawyer. The other characters were sustained by Messrs. Dyott, Floyd, Baker, Hill, Walcot, &c. Some excellent scenery has been painted for the piece, and the dresses are all new and good. The "Wreck Ashore" will be repeated to-night.

The Bennett Divorce Case in New-Haven.

Dr. Bennett's Testimony—His Family Difficulties.

From the New-Haven Journal, Nov. 10.

At the opening of the Court, yesterday, Dr. George Bennett took the stand, and Mr. Watrous, his counsel, took a seat by him, on account of his deafness. The Doctor testified, in a muffled and lugubrious tone, about calling on his children since the divorce; he called three or four times; once, when he called, found they had been taken to Derby; he did not know it at the time they went. His testimony was rambling, mixed up with hearsay, and interspersed with quips and quibbles, on the cross-examination, at Judge Blackman's questions. One reason why he did not like to call on his children was, that it was unpleasant to his feelings; his friends told him he had better not go, because, being hard of hearing, they might take advantage of him; another reason was, that once he noticed Mrs. Dickerman touching Mrs. Holford's toes, and afterward he concluded not to go. Witness gave a long account of meeting his daughter at the cemetery, taking her to the New-Haven House, and spending Sunday with her there—borrowing a dress of a neighbor, and putting it on her, and taking her to Church, where he sat in front of Governor Dutton. [Laughter.] He also read letters he received from his daughters, speaking of candies, fruit, &c.

On cross-examination, Judge Blackman asked if he had ever in Chapel-street, pushed any body into the street. He replied that once somebody named E. K. Foster pushed him into the street; he never drove Mrs. Bennett into a store; never spoke to her since the divorce; published Mrs. Bennett's petition in the Journal and Courier: paid $8 for it; intended to publish it through the country; never offered to convey the piano or furniture to Mr. Kimball for a nominal sum, to secure it from creditors; never asked Kimball to store it, and claim it as his own; tried to raise the $4,000 for Mrs. Bennett on the property.

Geo. C. Dickerman and R. B. Dyer testified that Dr. Bennett was a fit person to take charge of the children; did not know Mrs. Bennett, except to bow to her, and speak occasionally.

For the petitioner, John C. Kimball testified that Dr. Bennett tried to make him take his piano and furniture for $50 or $100, or to store and claim them as his own, to prevent Mrs. Bennett following him up in an attempt to make him support the children; witness positively declined; thought Dr. Bennett unfit to take charge of the children; he is passionate, and weak in intellect; does not know enough; heard him use very profane language in talking about the divorce case and the funeral expenses of his infant.

Mrs. Bennett was recalled—And positively denied ever telling Mrs. North the story she said she did, four years ago, about Mrs. Coles; she said she furnished her daughters with stationery and postage stamps to write to their father, and encouraged them to treat him with respect; Doctor paid funeral expenses of the infant, though before the funeral he sent her word she must pay half the expenses.

Geo. F. Kimball testified that on the death of the infant, Doctor offered to pay funeral expenses, but afterwards said he had figured it up, and found it would cost $40, and he would not do it, but would pay part. Witness persuaded him, at last, to advance him $40 on an agreement to refund all of it he could obtain from Mrs. Bennett. As Mrs. Bennett paid no part, witness paid all from Doctor's money.

On Wednesday morning the case was elaborately and eloquently argued by Messrs. R. I. Ingersoll and Blackman for Mrs. Bennett, and Messrs. Dutton and Watrous for the Doctor. The Judge reserved his decision until next week.

Personal.

The following bit of gossip is given by the Boston Traveller: "We hear that a New-York merchant, who has fully reached the middle period of life, and is worth a mint of dollars, is about to lead to the altar a young lady of this city, who has acquired, in the select circle in which she moves, the enviable title of the Belle of Boston. Matters are so far advanced that the marriage license has already been procured. It was at first proposed to have the wedding in church, and preparations were being made for a display such as has seldom been seen in this city, but in consequence of the comments upon the late 'diamond wedding' in New-York, this wedding will probably take place at a private residence, in the presence of only the few who may be so fortunate as to obtain cards of invitation."

"Ion" writes to the Baltimore Sun, from Washington, that Senator Sumner is about to resign his seat in the United States Senate. It is said that he will marry and reside in England. Gov. Banks will undoubtedly succeed him in the United States Senate.

Rev. E. Nute, Jr., of Lawrence, Kansas, is in Boston. He contemplates passing the Winter in Italy to recruit his health, which has been impaired by his labors in the new territory.

Rev. Dr. Cahill has postponed his departure from Ireland till the middle of November, when he will take passage by the Galway line of steamers. He purposes remaining in America until the end of next May.

The Panama Star says it is reported that Hon. Stafford Jerningham, Her British Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Lima, is shortly to be married, to a fair Limeña, celebrated for her musical talents.

Miscellaneous.

The Burlington (Vt.) Free Press states that through the efforts of Prof. Leonard Marsh, and the generosity of friends, there has been recently acquired for the Institution a superb copy, in 20 volumes, royal 8vo., of the great illustrated edition of Cuvier's Animal Kingdom—the notes and illustrations being made by a corps of his most eminent pupils and successors in France. A large and beautiful collection of stuffed American birds, said by Prof. Baird, of the Smithsonian Institute, to be unsurpassed for real excellence by more than three or four collections in the United States, has been received from New-York City, and is now in the University Museum.

The Worcester Transcript says that Mrs. D. W. Moore, of West Boylston, was safely delivered on the 7th inst., of a pair of twins more remarkably united than were the Siamese Twins. The pair were female children, perfect in form, but joined breast to breast from the collar-bone to the umbilical. There was one breast-bone on either side, and the ribs of both children were joined to these bones. There was but one liver in common, but double in size. The heart was of the same conformity. There was one kidney to each child, but they were double.

The Natchez Courier states that the city is infected with so many suspicious characters that it has become necessary to strengthen the place. Incendiarisms have been attempted and frequent rows and disturbances have occurred, under the hill, that alarm the law and order-loving citizens of the Bluff City.

The Great Eastern.—The New-York Times is the only American journal whose enterprise was manifested by a special correspondent on board

CITY INTELLIGENCE.

ANGLO-AFRICAN READING-ROOM.—The colored population of the City had a pleasant time last evening on the occasion of the opening of the Anglo-African Reading-room in Prince-street, near Thompson. Long before the hour appointed the rooms were crowded to excess. Rev. H. H. GARNET stated that the enterprise was but lately started, and that the words Anglo-African meant white and black. The reading-room was designed for all persons, irrespective of color, sect or party. The admission was to be one cent, so as to put it within the ability of all to avail themselves of its privileges. OLIVER JOHNSON, Esq., Secretary of the American Anti-Slavery Society, congratulated the colored people upon the advancement they had made within the last twenty-five years, and hoped they would keep on in the same course. Rev. J. SELLA MARTIN followed in the same train of thought. He urged upon the young men the duty of sustaining this enterprise, and now that they had taken such a progressive stride, they should be doubly careful whom they followed as leaders. Rev. E. P. ROGERS of Newark, then read a humorous poem upon "The Good Wife," which was received with great applause. The address, introductory to the reading-room, was delivered by E. F. UNDERHILL, Esq. He considered the colored population of the City to be superior in morals to many of their white brethren, and yet they were denied positions that they ought to fill. Of the Republican Party, he said that it intended not only to keep Slavery where it exists, but to abolish it entirely. He recommended his audience to make the best use of their new reading-room. The assemblage then inspected the contents of the reading-room, whence they did not depart until a late hour.

THE AFRICAN MUSEUM IN BROADWAY.—An exhibition, altogether novel, not only in this country, but in any other, has been opened within a few days at No. 635 Broadway. Mr. PAUL DUCHAILLU, a Frenchman by birth, but an American citizen, who has spen several years in the Equatorial regions of Central Africa, between the latitudes traversed respectively by BARTH and LIVINGSTONE, has brought with him on his return, a collection of the rarest animals known to natural science. Of these, the most curious are specimens of the male and female gorilla, the newly-discovered ferocious man-monkey, or monkey-man, of which, recently, various accounts have been published. This creature is as large as a man, with more than three times a man's strength. Others of the Troglodyte species, in the possession of Mr. DU CHAILLU, are [the "Koolo Kamba," a most fearful animal, bearing the nearest resemblance to the human species, of all the Simia tribe, and the "Neschiego," the least dangerous and most intelligent of the Troglodytes, building houses, uniting himself permanently to a mate and rearing a family, much after the fashion of human beings; altogether repudiating the Mormon system, as he contents himself with one wife. Skeletons of these creatures, in this collection, show, even more conclusively than these stuffed skins, what enormous power they possess. Various other objects of interest are in the exhibition, especially a collection of household and warlike implements and musical instruments of the natives, with specimens of their manufactures in hair and grass, from which their garments are woven. The exhibition will equally interest the student of Comparative Anatomy, the naturalist, and the merely curious.

ST. ANDREW'S SOCIETY.—The One Hundred and Third Anniversary of the St. Andrew's Society was observed last evening at the Metropolitan Hotel, in the election of officers for the year ensuing and the transaction of other Society business. The following gentlemen were unanimously elected officers of the Society:

President—ADAM NORRIE.
First Vice-President—John T. Johnston.
Second Vice-President—Robert Gordon.
Managers—Alexander McKenzie, William Paton, George Cruikshank, Allan Hay, Robert B. Campbell, James Frazer.
Treasurer—Robert Hyslop.
Secretary—Robert Dinwiddie.
Assistant Secretary—James Callender.
Physician—Alexander Elder.
Chaplains—Dr. John N. McLeod, Dr. John Thomson.

The report of the Treasurer shows the Society to be in a flourishing condition, and that it is as able as willing to assist the unfortunate. The annual dinner of the Society will take place at the Metropolitan Hotel on St. Andrew's Day, the 30th inst.

COUNTERFEIT BILLS.—A number of badly-executed counterfeits, representing five-dollar notes of the Citizens' Bank of Worcester, Mass., have lately been passed in this City. They are believed to have been issued by Philadelphia forgers, who arrived here last Monday. Yesterday, one ROBERT MCLEAN was taken before Justice SYKES to answer four complaints, made by storekeepers, doing business in First-avenue, of having given the spurious paper to them in payment for small purchases. On each charge the bail of McLean was fixed at $1,000. Not having a bondsman he was locked up.

TAMMANY SOCIETY.—The meeting of the disciples of St. Tammany, last evening, was well attended, though, on account of unfavorable intelligence from the interior of the State, it is said to have been rather sombre. A number of gentlemen were initiated into the mysteries of the Order, the council fires were extinguished earlier than usual, and the meeting adjourned.

FELONIOUS ASSAULT.—Last evening two women, named SUSAN BROPHY and MARGARET PERRIN, became engaged in a quarrel at their residence, No. 63 Park-street. Miss PERRIN seized a poker and struck her opponent with it, breaking her skull. The injured woman was taken to the Hospital, and Miss PERRIN was locked up in the Sixth Ward Station-house to answer.

MOZART HALL PRIMARIES.—The Mozart Hall Democrats held primary meetings throughout the City, last evening, preliminary to an election of delegates to a convention to nominate candidates for the various municipal offices.

THE GALWAY STEAMER.—The steamer Jason sailed yesterday, for Galway, with two hundred and eighty-nine passengers, and no specie.

CITY GOVERNMENT.

BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

FERRY TO STATEN ISLAND—INSPECTION OF STEAM BOILERS—THE CITY INSPECTOR ON GARBAGE.

There was barely a quorum present at the meeting of the Board of Aldermen last evening.

A resolution directing the Comptroller to advertise for sale the right to run a ferry from the foot of Battery place to Staten Island, in accordance with the provisions of the Charter of 1857, was referred to the Committee on Ferries.

Resolutions redistricting the Seventh, Eleventh and Thirteenth Wards were adopted, and sent to the Councilmen for concurrence.

Alderman PECK presented an ordinance providing for the appointment of an Inspector of steam-boilers, steam-engines and machinery.

Alderman PECK wanted it laid over, printed in the minutes, and made the special order for Monday next.

Alderman ADAMS thought the ordinance was presented a little ahead of time; the Committee of the Councilmen which had this matter in charge had not had time to report.

Alderman OWENS was for referring it.

It was finally laid over and made the special order for Thursday next.

The Comptroller transmitted to the Board a summary of expenditures on City Trust and Special Accounts, from Jan. 1 to Oct. 31, amounting in the aggregate to $14,771,522 64. It was ordered on file.

The following communication from the City Inspector was referred:

CITY INSPECTOR'S DEPARTMENT, Nov. 10, 1859.
To the Honorable the Common Council of the City of New-York:

GENTLEMEN: On the 3d day of October last I addressed to your honorable body a communication, relative to the efforts of this Department having been found unavailing in preventing the deposit of ashes and garbage on the streets from tenement and other houses, and inclosing for your consideration an ordinance which, in my opinion, would in a great measure prevent the abuse complained of, and soliciting your early attention to the subject. The season of the year is at hand when a very large proportion of our streets is made the receptacle of ashes and garbage, from the want of proper boxes or conveniences, and, no matter how cleanly a street may be swept, in less than six hours afterwards it is made filthy by the deposit of ashes and garbage thereon. The want of some proper remedy is so severely felt by this Department, that I deem it my duty to again call the attention of your honorable body to this matter, and to respectfully solicit at your hands some speedy action thereon. Very respectfully, &c.

DANIEL E. DELAVAN, City Inspector.

In accordance with the suggestion of the Croton Aqueduct Board, a resolution was adopted making a further appropriation of $5,000, for "water pipes and laying," under the direction of that Department.

The Board then adjourned to Monday.

THE BOARD OF COUNCILMEN.

CITY EXPENDITURES AND TRUST AND SPECIAL ACCOUNTS.

The Board of Councilmen last evening referred a resolution to the Committee on Streets directing the paving of Horatio and Jane streets, from West-street to the Hudson River, under direction of the Croton Aqueduct Department.

A resolution was adopted granting permission to the Central Park Commissioners to regulate and grade Fifty-ninth-street, from the Fifth to Eighth-avenue, at their own expense.

The Street Commissioner was directed to advertise for proposals for building a pier 500 feet long at the foot of Forty-first-street, North River. He was likewise directed to advertise for proposals for building an additional story on the extension of the house of Hose Company No. 30, in Twenty-seventh-street.

A communication was received from the Corporation Attorney stating that $508 19 had been received by his bureau for violations of ordinances during the month of October.

The report of the Committee on Finance in favor of giving $4,423 65 to the Colored Orphan Asylum to pay sundry assessments, was received and laid over. So, also, was a report of the same Committee in favor of paying R. N. Bull $1,807 for furnishing correct time by which to ring the various fire alarm bells.

A communication was received from the Council of the New-York Sanitary Association, requesting from the Common Council an appropriation for general distribution by the Sanitary Association of one thousand copies of the proceedings of the National Quarantine and Sanitary Convention, held in this City in April last, especially those portions relating to the subjects of yellow fever and the internal hygiene of cities. The communication was referred to a Special Committee on Sanitary Affairs.

A resolution to amend the ordinance regulating the Election Districts in the Four h, Seventh, Eighth and Thirteenth Wards, was laid over.

A communication was received from the Comptroller giving a summary of the expenditures on City Accounts, also upon the several Trust and Special Accounts from Jan. 1, 1859, to Oct. 31, amounting in the aggregate to $14,771,522 64.

Councilman VAN TINE offered a resolution to discharge the Committee on Railroads from further consideration of the resolution allowing the Hudson River Railroad Company to lay down four sets of rails in one street, and to run small cars thereon. The resolution was lost.

THE SEAMEN'S CONVENTION.

Convention of the Chaplains and other Friends of Seamen.

SECOND DAY.

The morning meeting was opened with prayer by Rev. Mr. PERRY, of Philadelphia.

Letters were then read by Mr. HARRIS, Secretary of the Port Society, from Rev. T. H. LEONARD, Pastor of the Seamen's Bethel, at Chicago, Ill., which gave an encouraging account of his efforts among seamen in that city.

A letter was read from Rev. J. STOCKBRIDGE, Chaplain of United States Navy, stating that he regretted that unavoidable engagements compelled him to be absent.

The resolutions reported by the Business Committee on Wednesday, were taken up.

The first recommended was, that there should be a more energetic effort among the friends of the sailor to hasten the day when "the abundance of the sea" should be brought to the knowledge of God. Rev. CHAS. JONES then made a speech, earnestly hoping that the resolution would not be merely a form of words, but expressions of the heart, and indications of vigorous action.

The second resolution referred to the extremely detrimental system of paying advance wages to seamen.

Rev. Mr. JONES desired one of the gentlemen present to give an account of his personal experience of the ill effects of this system. Mr. THOMAS MCGUIRE, keeper of a sailors' boarding-house in Philadelphia, drew a heart-rending picture of the evils resulting from this practice, and censured the shipping merchants for their indifference to the evils arising from this, and said that they patronized dishonest agents. Mr. MCGUIRE said that efforts had been made to abolish this system, but while the merchants encourage it they had but little hope of doing much good. Several of the gentlemen present spoke of the bad effects of the system, and said much to show that the merchants themselves suffered by it and finally recommended the appointment of a Committee to bring the matter fully to the notice of those most interested in doing away with this evil system. Finally, Mr. PLUMMER, of Philadelphia, offered a resolution to the effect that a Committee of Five be appointed to inquire into the matter. The resolution was adopted.

The next resolution was in relation to the sin of licentiousness among seamen. They had to deplore the prevalence of this frightful evil among the men of the sea, and the influence of the Gospel must be brought more strongly to bear upon them to combat this sin.

The next resolution was one recommending the abolition of the spirit orations in the United States Navy. Rev. Mr. JONES made an excellent speech, setting forth the great hindrance which the spirit ration offered to the reclaiming the sailor. No matter what promises of amendment were made by the sailor on shore, when he went on board he found his spirit rations ready for him, and his good resolutions vanished. Mr. JONES said that the sailors themselves would favor any scheme to remove this foul blot from the navy. Many of them stopped their own grog, and many others had not the courage to go to the Purser and ask him to stop it. If Uncle Sam stopped it himself, however, he had no doubt that the sailors would approve it.

Capt. A. H. FOOTE, U. S. M., made some very sensible remarks upon this question. From his experience of twenty years spent in actual sea-service, he could speak fully and freely on the dreadful influence of the spirit ration. He agreed with a distinguished officer of the Navy, who said that the grog-tub was the manufactory of drunkenness. He had fought the evil for ten years, and he intended to fight the hydra-headed monster, until it would be entirely destroyed.

Dr. SNODGRASS moved that a Committee of five be appointed, with Capt. FOOTE as Chairman, to put this matter in the shape of an address to be presented to both Houses of Congress, praying the suppression of this abuse.

The resolution was unanimously adopted.

The meeting then adjourned to meet again at 2 o'clock.

At the afternoon session, the resolution offered by Dr. SNODGRASS was, on motion of Mr. HARRIS, further considered. Mr. LOOMIS was in favor of having the committee prepare a memorial, to be referred to the Port Society and the Seaman's Friend Society, and obtaining signatures to them, petitioning Congress for the abolition of spirit rations in the navy. The following resolution was adopted—with this amendment:

Resolved, That this Convention earnestly recommend that energetic and judicious measures be adopted to secure the entire removal of the naval spirit ration, inasmuch as it is unjust to require the religious and temperate people of the country to contribute to the national expenses of furnishing the grog-tub, (as if it were on a par with good provisions and clothing,) which a distinguished officer of our navy has described as a manufactory of drunkards; inasmuch, also, as the discontinuance of the ration has been recommended in an annual report by one of the Secretaries of the Navy; as it has been voted to be discontinued by a majority of two sessions of the United States House of Representatives, and has been urged by a large number of our most efficient, gallant and reliable navy officers.

The next resolution recommended that the Sabbath day should be more strictly honored among sailors while at sea. Several of the gentlemen mentioned the unnecessary work which officers of ships require seamen to perform on the Sabbath, and their demoralizing influence.

Capt. A. H. FOOTE, U. S. N., offered the following resolution, which was adopted by the Convention:

Resolved, That inasmuch as the Divine Command "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy," applies equally on sea and land, we most respectfully and earnestly solicit all merchants and masters of vessels to employ every opportunity in their power to secure the regular observance of that day, by avoiding all unnecessary labor upon it, and, wherever practicable, by attending to the celebration of Divine Worship, and that the officers of the navy especially, and others attached to the naval service and merchant marine, be cordially invited to coöperate in affording facilities for holding religious meetings on shipboard in their several ships.

A resolution was adopted appointing a committee to inquire into the laws for issuing protections to American and other seamen, the clearance of vessels, and other laws affecting seamen, which were now imperfectly carried out, and devising some means for their amendment.

Other similar resolutions were offered and carried, and the Convention closed, to meet again this morning at 10 o'clock.

Mal-Administration of Chloroform.

ALLEGED ATTEMPT OF A PHYSICIAN TO MAKE AWAY HIS WIFE.

A serious charge was made yesterday before Alderman BRADY, at the City Hall Police Court, by MRS. MARY WILSON, the wife of Dr. JOHN H. WILSON, a druggist and practicing physician, whose place of business is at No. 229 Ninth-avenue.

The lady states that about eighteen months since she was married to the Doctor, but, finding it impossible to be happy together, at the expiration of six months they decided to separate. She took up her residence with her mother, her husband allowing her a small sum each month wherewith to pay her board. This arrangement continued, she alleges, until three weeks since, when proceedings were instituted before Justice CONNOLLY, with a view to a permanent separation, and provision for her support. Upon consultation, however, with the Doctor and her own friends, she consented to live with him again, and accordingly resumed her position in his house. On Monday night last she states that she went with Dr. WILSON to spend an evening with a friend. He was then unusually kind to her. Returning home, she retired at 10 o'clock, leaving the Doctor attending to business. From that time she was unconscious until an early hour on Tuesday morning, when she was aroused by friends who told her that she had been under the influence of chloroform.

Mr. CLARK STONER, who lives in the upper part of the same house, and Mr. JOSEPH HOLMES, who had taken board there for a few days, state that they were called by the Doctor at 2 o'clock on Thursday morning. He asked them to look at Mrs. WILSON, as he believed her to be dying. Proceeding to the room, they detected the odor of chloroform, and found the lady in bed, breathing stentoriously, and having a handkerchief saturated with the liquid placed across her mouth. After some time, finding their efforts to arouse her unavailing, they say that they suggested to the Doctor the propriety of administering something for her relief. He replied that it was nothing but a spasm, and that it would soon be over. Becoming alarmed at the lady's condition, they determined to send for a physician, but they state that the husband objected in such strenuous terms that they did not carry out their intention. A messenger was dispatched, however, to No. 135 Reade-street, the residence of Mrs. BOYD, the lady's mother, and, upon the arrival of the latter, a physician was immediately called, who administered restoratives, and when Mrs. WILSON had recovered sufficiently she was removed to her mother's residence. Mrs. WILSON's appearance in Court yesterday excited a great deal of sympathy. She is a pleasant looking woman, about 23 years of age, and was evidently in a feeble state of health. A warrant was issued by the magistrate for the arrest of Dr. WILSON, and it was given to Officer SMITH for execution. The accused was apprehended last evening and brought to Court. When informed of the nature of the charge against him he answered that it was a very foolish one. He was committed in default of $10,000 bail, pending an examination to be entered upon to-day at 12 o'clock. Dr. WILSON is apparently about 40 years of age. He is an Irishman, and has lived in this country nearly twelve years.

INDIA.

Hindoo Literature, Athletes and Jugglers—Lecture by the Rev. Dr. Scudder.

Dr. HENRY MARTIN SCUDDER delivered at the Cooper Institute, last evening, before a large audience, the second lecture in his course on India. He directed his attention on this occasion especially to the physical beauties of the country, to the literature of the Hindoos, and their athletes and jugglers. Dr. SCUDDER commenced by stating briefly the geographical position and extent of India, taking occasion to describe the Island of Ceylon—his own birthplace. He then rapidly glanced at the physical peculiarities of the wonderful Himalayas, the extensive plains, the lovely valleys, the multitudinous temples, the majestic river—including the venerable Ganges, and the general beauty of Indian scenery. He gave a humorous description of his experience in riding an Indian pony—holding on by the saddle and hooking his legs under the thin body of the animal. The peculiarity of the rivers of Southern India he stated to be that, though under the burning suns their beds might appear to be dry, there still coursed beneath the surface pure streams. Such a subterranean stream flowed beneath the apparently sandy bed of the Milk River, near which he lived, and which was so fierce in its torrent as to engulph the unsuspecting animals who chanced to venture on its seemingly safe surface. While admitting the almost unendurable heat of the scorching sun of the great Peninsula, he pictured in inviting terms the luxurious products of nature—offsetting their exuberant profusion against the physical disadvantages of the climate—the palm, the orange, the lemon, the banana, and their confreres, against the fierce heat under which they flourished. He then, as he said, "took a long stride to the subject of jugglers, and would try to settle an important question, Can snakes be charmed?" He answered in the affirmative, and proceeded to describe the musical operations of the snake-charmers, their transparent pretences to power over the venomous reptiles, his own experience in testing their capabilities, and the wonderful little animal the species of weasel, which does not hesitate to grapple with the most voracious snake. Dr. SCUDDER created considerable merriment by relating a number of instances of the dexterity of the Hindoo jugglers—the rapidity of whose motions, he thought, was caused by an application of the homœopathic principle to time. The Hindoo holy books, he dated as far back as 1,400 years before Christ. The immensity of their vernacular and Sanscrit compilations on most every imaginable subject he considered marvellous. As an illustration of the extraordinary rapidity with which they wrote—even with their rude materials, he mentioned that he had known school-boys to report a sermon as fast as the missionary could deliver it. He gave the audience a keen appreciation of the alliterative character and soft cadences of the Hindoo tongue, by repeating a number of stanzas in that language—some of them rhyming at both ends of the line. As an evidence of the highly elevating tendency of a portion of their literature, he recited a number of maxims, among which were the following:

"Sweet is the pipe; sweet is the lute, say they who have never listened to the prattle of their own children."

"The fruit when green rears its head like a base man, but when it is ripe in the harvest, it is inclined like the head of the wise."

"Love your enemies—those of kind disposition return love for hatred, as the more you squeeze sugar-cane the more juice it gives."

Says one Hindoo: "Wash charcoal as much as you like, it will always remain black; so a bad man cannot become good." "But," replies another, "Let fire enter in the charcoal, and it becomes luminous; and so truth entering into a bad man will make him luminously good."

"Do good to others—it will come back to you. The water which you pour on the roots of the cocoa-nut tree comes back to you sweetened from the top."

Yet Hindoo literature abounded in folly and filth, and much of it was unfit for perusal. It was, however, springing up afresh, with the beautiful truths of the Bible infused into it. Dr. SCUDDER took occasion, at this point, to chant several Hindoo melodies, and concluded his lecture with some marvellous tales of the feats of Hindoo athletes.

The third lecture of the course will be delivered in the same place on Monday evening, the 14th inst.

The Fog.

ITS EFFECTS ON NAVIGATION—A ROW-BOAT CAPSIZED.

The fog which prevailed so extensively on Wednesday continued yesterday, interrupting navigation to a great extent. None of the vessels which were below last evening were able to get up to the City. At 7 o'clock yesterday morning, the ship Bridgewater was reported as in tow of a steam-tug at the Hook, but at a late hour last night she had not reached her pier. Although the steamers from the Eastward arrived in good season, they did not leave again until 8 o'clock P. M. when the fog lifted partially. So far as could be ascertained no damage was occasioned by collisions. On the East River ferries but two boats were running when there were the largest numbers crossing. Much impatience was caused at the unavoidable delays experienced. At 5 o'clock the ferry-boat Quarantine ceased her trips, leaving a large number of passengers to spend the night in New-York. The ferry-boat Montauk, which grounded Wednesday afternoon, was got off without any difficulty, and resumed her trips.

The only casualty reported was the capsizing of a row-boat in the North River by the steam-tug Fulton about 7 o'clock in the morning. Three men, who were in the small boat, were drowned, but their names could not be ascertained, nor could any other clue be found by which to establish their identity than the mariner's coats which were recovered.

BROOKLYN INTELLIGENCE.

Special Meeting of the Common Council—The Water-Works—A Railroad Grant Vetoed.

A special meeting of the Board of Aldermen was held last evening, President KALBFLEISCH in the chair. A communication was received from the Mayor, vetoing a resolution adopted on the 31st ult., granting to James M. Waterbury and associates the right to construct a railroad on Grand-street and run horse-cars thereon, for the reason that the terms of the law giving the Common Council power to make such grants were not complied with. The law requires, first, the consent of a majority of the property-owners along the line of a proposed route; then the Common Council must advertise (stating the terms) for proposals, and the right of way is then to be awarded to the lowest bidder—the party agreeing to carry passengers at the lowest fare. In the case of the Grand-street road, a majority of the property-owners petitioned the Common Council to give Messrs. Waterbury and associates the grant, and the advertisement for proposals stated this fact. Only three proposals were received. The parties to whom the grant was awarded, proposed to carry passengers for five cents each, while two of the parties offered to carry for three cents each. The communication was laid on the table and ordered printed.

A communication was next read from the Water Commissioners, showing their action accepting the conditions proposed by the Common Council, to settle all difficulties between the two Boards, with certificate attached, duly executed, that the Water Works are capable of delivering and distributing a daily supply of 10,000,000 gallons of water, and have the capacity to do so; and that there is, at the present time, a supply of at least 4,000,000 of gallons per day, the balance being temporarily cut off for the purpose of building a conduit in place of the canal.

Accompanying the above was a certificate of the contractors, giving their assent to turning over the works to the city as far as completed. All of the documents were accepted by the Common Council and placed at large upon the minutes. Under this action the Water Works, so far as completed, will be immediately placed under the charge of the permanent Water Board.

Under the special order, a report of the Railroad Committee, in favor of granting to E. B. Litchfield and associates the right of way to construct railroads and run horse-cars on Furman-street, from Water to Atlantic streets; Atlantic-street to Flatbush-avenue, Powers-street, Lafayette, Bedford and Gates avenues to Broadway; Montague-street from the Wall-street Ferry to Furman-street; also, Fifth-avenue to Thirty-seventh-street, with a branch from Fifth-avenue to the city line, was taken up, and owing to the absence of the necessary evidence of the number of petitioners for these roads the report was referred back to the Committee with directions to report the same. The same Committee reported against licensing a line of stages on Montague and Court streets, which was laid on the table. The same Committee reported in favor of giving the Brooklyn City Railroad Company permission to change their route to Greenpoint, from Kent to Classon-avenue, but it was laid over for two weeks, on motion of Alderman STRONG, who desired to ascertain if some arrangement could not be made in connection with this change, so that the Railroad Company would run cars from Williamsburgh, to pass in the vicinity of the City Hall. A petition was received from W. L. Haskins, asking for permission to lay rail tracks on Lafayette and Greene avenues, and from J. Whittlesey & Son, for the same grant on Bushwick-avenue, Myrtle-avenue Plank Road, Morrell, Messerole and South Fourth streets. Both were referred to the Railroad Committee. The Board adjourned to Monday evening next.

A BOLD THIEF AND A VIGILANT POLICEMAN.—Officer HOUGH, of the First Precinct, about 8 o'clock yesterday morning saw a man leave LOWE'S jewelry-store, No. 236 Fulton-street, in so hurried a manner that it excited his suspicion, and he started in pursuit. As soon as the man saw the officer was following him, he began to run, and in his flight threw into an areaway, at the corner of Fulton and Nassau streets, five gold watches, which it was found he had stolen from the store he had just left. The thief was taken to the Station-house, where he gave his name as JOHN WILLIAMS. He was committed to answer.

PICKPOCKETS AT A FUNERAL.—A large number of pickpockets attended a funeral in St. Ann's Church, Washington-street, yesterday noon. Officers RAYNER and VAN WAGNER detected two of the party, and conveyed them to the City Hall. One of them proved to be the noted "chief mourner," BILL HATFIELD, and the other JAMES NORTON, an equally well-known pickpocket. On them was found a lady's purse, containing a small sum of money, for which an owner is wanted.

ACCIDENT.—DANIEL JUDGE had both of his legs broken at the corner of Washington and Nassau streets yesterday, by a large stone falling upon him. He was taken to the City Hospital.

BROOKLYN CENTRAL RAILROAD.

First Excursion Train Over the Entire Track—Festivities.

The President and Directors of the "Brooklyn Central Railroad Company," (Atlantic-street,) with various noted guests, made an excursion to Jamaica, yesterday, in the horse-cars of the Company.

On the arrival of the cars at Jamaica, quite a number of the citizens of that place were in waiting, to welcome the visitors, and to signify their joy on account of the new enterprise. The President, Directors and friends of the Company, were escorted to the principal hotel of the village, where they found prepared a lunch, which the whole party partook of freely.

During the repast, Ex-Gov. KING, in response to a sentiment proposed by E. B. LITCHFIELD, Esq., President of the new Company, made an interesting and eloquent speech, in which he referred to the early history of the Brooklyn and Jamaica Railroad Company; to the fact that the company was organized as early as 1832; that it had ever been a successful and paying enterprise; that the travel between Jamaica and Brooklyn had been more than sufficient to sustain the old road; that under the new arrangement of horse cars, instead of steam, he had not a doubt but that his village would add largely to its population; that such proving true, the travel on the old route, now new, must necessarily increase; and that the "Brooklyn Central Railroad" could not fail to be a rich paying investment to stockholders, and a great accommodation to the people.

At the conclusion of Gov. KING's speech, E. B. LITCHFIELD, Esq., in response to a sentiment, made a happy, practical, and stirring speech. He alluded to the new enterprise, showing the difficulties which had been encountered in removing steam from Atlantic-street, and stating that they had not only been overcome, but that the new organization was on a firm basis, and was already paying beyond the expectation of the most sanguine friend of the new project.

Following Mr. LITCHFIELD, interesting speeches were made alternately by some of the first citizens of Brooklyn and Jamaica—all embodying the sanguine opinion that the new enterprise was called for by the wants of the public; that it would be the means of peopling the whole route from Brooklyn to Jamaica; that the avenue through which the track passed was superior to any in the country for a horse railroad; and that the business of the road could not fail to quadruple in a very short period.

At the conclusion of the lunch, the President, Directors and friends took leave of Jamaica, and returned to Brooklyn. The excursion, notwithstanding the rain, was a very pleasant one; and judging from the spirits and sentiments of the whole party, it can scarcely fail to add great interest and progress to the new enterprise.

FROM THE CHEROKEE NATION.—A Tahlequah letter to the St. Louis Republican, dated Oct. 26, says: "On the night of the 22d, ELLIS BUFFINGTON was waylaid and murdered, a few miles beyond Fort Gibson, by MCBRYANT, TIM FIELDS and ELI SMITH. BUFFINGTON was spending the night at a house, and being informed that some persons had stolen one of his horses, went out to see about it in company with a small boy, but had proceeded only a short distance before he was shot four times and literally riddled with buck-shot and revolver balls. He was then robbed, it is said, of something like one hundred and fifty dollars. There are here at present a considerable number of Indians, on a visit to their Cherokee brothers, including Osages, Sauks and Foxes, and members of the St. Regis tribe from New-York and Canada. The first-named, it is supposed, are simply on a begging expedition, while the others would like to secure homes among the Cherokees.

GAS LIGHT STOCKS FOR SALE,
In various City Companies, paying from Eight to Twelve per cent dividends.
JOHN B. MURRAY,
No. 49 Wall st., New-York,
Proprietor of the American Gas Light Journal.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT BOOKS for the subscription of $250,000 as additional stock to the MECHANICS' BANK of Missouri, at St. Louis, will be opened at the Bank of America, in this City, on and after Monday, the 24th inst.
The authorized capital of this Bank is $1,500,000, of which $757,425 has been taken and paid up by the citizens of Missouri. This Bank has been in operation over two years—was the only Bank west of the Mississippi that did not suspend specie payments in 1857. Regular half-yearly dividends of five per cent. have been declared, with an accumulated surplus of $36,643. The charter is liberal in its provisions, has not the personal liability clause, and has 25 years to run. St. Louis is considered one of the safest and best points in the West for Banking operations. But few better opportunities for investment are offered. The attention of capitalists and others is called to the subject. Ten per cent. will be required to be paid at the time of subscribing, the residue within the next ensuing year, as the Directors may call on due notice, but may all be paid up at the time, at the option of the subscriber. Pro rata dividends will be paid to subscribers from the day of payment. Dividends to Eastern stockholders will be paid in New-York. Persons desiring other and further information, will obtain the same by applying at the Bank of America.
J. W. WILLS, President.
New-York, Oct. 22, 1859.

NOTICE.—THE INTEREST DUE ON THE FIRST Mortgage Bonds, issued by the La Crosse and Milwaukee Railroad Company, due Nov. 1, 1859, will not be paid on that day.
The earnings of the road during the present year have been fifty per cent. less than estimated or anticipated, while the necessary expenses of operating and maintaining the road, with the additional expense of right of way, which became absolutely necessary to run the road, have been such as to compel me to ask indulgence, authorized by the terms of the mortgage (sixty days,) which, I trust, will be time enough for the earnings of the road to be sufficient to pay said interest. Notice of the time and place of payment will be duly published.
S. CHAMBERLAIN,
Mortgagee in Possession.

LAURA KEENE'S THEATRE.—Seventeen years ago, or thereabouts, Mr. Charles Kean produced at the Park Theatre, a five-act play by Mr. Lovell, called "Love's Sacrifice." Although written by one of the most eminent British dramatists, the play had its first hearing in America. It was played throughout the Union, and obtained marked success in every city where it was acted. Latterly Mr. Kean revived this drama at the Princess' Theatre, where it was again successful. With such an agreeable prestige, Miss Laura Keene secured the "Wife's Secret" for her theatre, where it was played last evening. The scene is laid in England, in the time of the Protectorate. Lady Amyott (Miss Laura Keene) is the wife of a Colonel (Mr. Jordan) in Cromwell's army. Her brother, Lord Arden, (Mr. Daly,) is a violent Monarchist, and, in the absence of Col. Amyott, claims shelter in his house, at the same time making Lady Amyott swear to keep the fact of his being under her roof a secret from every one. The suspicions of Col. Amyott are aroused by a villainous steward, Sneed, (Mr. Burnett,) and in a powerful scene the husband receives almost positive proof of the guilt of his wife, who is seen through a window embracing the cavalier. The lady remains faithful to her oath, and is about to be put away by her husband when Lord Arden escapes, is fired upon by Amyott's order, and falls as if dead. In the agony of the moment the wife declares that the fugitive is her brother, but the husband refuses to believe her, and cheers on the pursuers. Lord Arden is brought back unhurt, and the curtain descends upon mutual explanations and a tableau of happiness. The play is admirably constructed, the characters forcible and well imagined, and the language terse, easy, elegant and forcible, without being overstrained. Miss Keene played Lady Amyott with fine effect. In the last act her mingled supplications for the life of her brother, her anxiety for his safety, and her shriek of horror when her husband announces the supposed death of the fugitive, were admirably worked up. Miss Keene had a fine artistic opportunity, and made the most of it. Mr. Jordan played Col. Amyott in a manly and dignified way, and in the last act shared the triumphs of the night with Miss Keene. Mr. Burnett was good, though a little given to exaggeration, in the part of the steward, and two minor characters were cleverly acted by Misses Wells and M'Carthy. The piece was mounted well, acted carefully throughout, and made an entire success. A play so good as this in a dramatic point of view, and so entirely unexceptionable in every way

THE SCHILLER CENTENARY.

Gathering at the Cooper Institute, by W. C. Bryant, Esq., Hon. Judge Daly, Drs. Schramm, Wiesner, &c.—Jubilee at the Academy of Music.

SECOND DAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

The countrymen of SCHILLER were even more enthusiastic in the City yesterday, than on the previous day, and business among them seemed to be generally laid aside. The first public proceedings in the poet's honor commenced at 1 P. M., in the great hall of the Cooper Institute, which was comfortably filled—not to overflowing—with a most respectable and intelligent audience, among whom there was a fair sprinkling of Americans. The stage or platform was beautifully decorated, and in quite a novel manner. At the rear, in the centre, was a full-length statuesque painting of SCHILLER, framed in a border of evergreens and immortelles, most tastefully interwoven. On each side of this picture—the whole forming a semi-circle—were busts of German and Italian poets standing on high pedestals, shaded by embowering orange trees, thick with golden fruit, through which and through the bright green glistering leaves, the pure white busts and pedestals shone forth with a dazzling effect. In front, on the edge of the platform, were other busts, of HOMER and DANTE, rising amid other orange trees, and amid, seeming groves of myrtle and large flowering shrubs, gay with many hues. Before the two pillars nearest the centre of the stage were noble casts, some six feet in height, of Melpomene and Thalia. Before each of the four pillars was a large shield bearing a suitable device, while from the ceiling, suspended between the two pillars, was a large circular painting representing the Genius of Liberty. Festoons of flowers and evergreens dangled in profusion from pillar to pillar, the tout ensemble having a splendid effect, with a little of the Arabian Nights about it. A fine band (HARWIG'S) was in attendance, and played from time to time both plaintive and stirring airs.

The President of the Schiller Society, Dr. WILLIAM LOEWE, delivered the opening address in German, after which letters apologetic for non-attendance were read in German and English from various invited parties, those in English being from the President of the United States, Gov. MORGAN and WASHINGTON IRVING. Press of business prevented the two former from attending. The precarious state of his health was the reason assigned by the latter. But he was with them in spirit, honoring SCHILLER as one of the world's great poets and master minds.

Dr. CARL SCHRAMM then addressed the audience at considerable length in German. He made special reference to SCHILLER's devotion to Freedom, to the unselfishness of his dedication to all the highest interests of the race, to the purity of his life, and the nobility of his example. The speaker was frequently and loudly applauded.

The President next introduced WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT, Esq., who, after the applause which greeted him had subsided, spoke as follows:

Mr. BRYANT said:

I am sensible that, after the eloquent words which have been just uttered by the countryman of the great poet whose birth we commemorate, and uttered in the noble language in which he wrote, I can say little that will interest this assembly. My own shortcomings, however, will be more than made up by the gentleman who, I understand, is to speak after me, and I therefore engage that I will not attempt to hold your attention long.

It might seem a presumptuous if not an absurd proceeding, for an American to speak of the literary character of SCHILLER in the presence of Germans, who are familiar with all that he has written to a degree which cannot be expected of us, and by whom the spirit of his writings, to the minutest particular, must be far more easily, and, we may therefore suppose, should be more thoroughly apprehended. Yet, let me be allowed to say that the name of SCHILLER, more than that of any other poet of his country, and for the very reason that he was a great tragic poet, belongs, not to the literature of Germany alone, but to the literature of the world. The Germans themselves have taught us this truth in relation to the tragic poets. In no part of the world is our SHAKESPEARE more devoutly studied than in Germany: nowhere are his writings made the subject of profounder criticism, and the German versions of his dramas are absolute marvels of skillful translation.

We may therefore well say to the countrymen of SCHILLER: "SCHILLER is yours, but he is ours also. It was your country that gave him birth, but the people of all nations have made him their countryman by adoption. The influences of his genius have long since overflowed the limits within which his mother tongue is spoken, and have colored the dramatic literature of the whole world. In some shape or other, with abatement of loudness, from their original splendor and beauty, but still glorious and still powerful over the minds of men, his dramas have become the common property of mankind. His personages walk our stage, and, in the familiar speech of our firesides utter the sentiments which he put into their mouths. We tremble alternately with fear and hope; we are moved to tears of admiration, we are melted to tears of pity; it is SCHILLER who touches the master chord to which our hearts answer. He compels us to a painful sympathy with his 'Robber Chief;' he makes us parties to the grand conspiracy of Fiesco, and willing lieges of Fiesco's gentle consort Leonora; we sorrow with him for the young, magnanimous, generous, unfortunate Don Carlos, and grieve scarcely less for the guileless and angelic Elizabeth; he dazzles us with the splendid ambition and awes us with the majestic fall of Wallenstein; he forces us to weep for MARY STUART and for the Maid of Orleans; he thrills us with wonder and delight at the glorious and successful revolt of WILLIAM TELL. Suffer us, then, to take part in the honors you pay to his memory, to shower the violets of Spring upon his sepulchre, and twine it with the leaves and plants that wither not in the frost of Winter."

We of this country, too, must honor SCHILLER as the poet of freedom. He was one of those who could agree with COWPER in saying that, if he could worship aught visible to the human eye or shaped by the human fancy, he would rear an altar to Liberty, and bring to it, at the beginning and close of every day, his offering of praise. SCHILLER began to write when our country was warring with Great Britain for its independence, and his genius attained the maturity of its manhood just as we had made peace with our powerful adversary and stood upon the earth a full-grown nation. It was then that the poet was composing his noble drama of "Don Carlos," in which the Marquis of Posa is introduced as laying down to the tyrant, PHILLIP of Spain, the great law of Freedom. In the drama of "The Robbers," written in SCHILLER'S youth, we are sensible of a fiery, vehement, destructive impatience with society, on account of the abuses which it permits; an enthusiasm of reform, almost without plan or object; but in his works composed afterwards we find the true philosophy of reform calmly and clearly stated. The Marquis of Posa, in an interview with Philip, tells him, at the peril of his life, truths which he never heard before, exhorts him to lay the foundations of his power in the happiness and affections of his people, by observing the democratic precept that no tie should fetter the citizen save respect for the rights of his brethren, as perfect and as sacred as his own, and prophesies the approaching advent of freedom, which, unfortunately, we are looking for still—that universal Spring which should yet make young the nations of the earth.

Yet was SCHILLER no mad innovator. He saw that society required to be pruned, but did not desire that it should be uprooted—he would have it reformed, but not laid waste. What was ancient in its usages and ordinances, and therefore endeared to many, he would, where it was possible, improve and adapt to the present wants of mankind. I remember a passage in which his respect for those devices of form and usage by which the men of a past age sought to curb and restrain the powers of their rulers, is beautifully illustrated. I quote from the magnificent translation of his "Wallenstein," made by COLERIDGE. Let me say here that I know of no English translation of a poem of any length which, a few passages excepted, so perfectly reproduces the original as this, and that if the same hand had given us in our language the other dramas of this author, we should have had an English Schiller worthy to be placed by the side of the German. "My son," says Octavio Piccolomini, addressing the youthful warrior, Max:

> "My son, of those old narrow ordinances
> Let us not hold too lightly. They are weights
> Of priceless value, which oppressed mankind
> Tied to the volatile will of the oppressor.
> For always formidable was the league
> And partnership of free power with free will."

And then, remarking that what slays and destroys goes directly to its mark, like the thunderbolt and the cannon ball, shattering everything that lies in their way, he claims a beneficent circuitousness for those ancient ordinances which make so much of the machinery of society.

> "My son, the road the human being travels,
> That on which Blessing comes and goes, doth follow
> The river's path, the valley's playful windings,
> Curves round the corn-field and the hill of vines,
> Honoring the holy bounds of property,
> And thus, secure, though late, leads to its end."

SCHILLER perceived the great truth that old laws, if not watched, slide readily into abuses, and knew that constant revision and renovation are the necessary conditions of free political society; but he would have the revision made without forgetting that the men of the present day are of the same blood with those who lived before them. He would have the new garments fitted to the figure that must wear them, such as nature and circumstances have made it, even to its disproportions. He would have the old pass into the new by gradations which should avoid violence, and its concomitants, confusion and misery.

The last great dramatic work of SCHILLER—and whether it be not the grandest production of his genius I leave to others to judge—is founded on the most remarkable and beneficent political revolution which, the glory of which belongs solely to the Teutonic race—that ancient vindication of the great right of nationality and independent government, the revolt of Switzerland against the domination of Austria, which gave birth to a Republic now venerable with the antiquity of five hundred years. He took a silent page from history, and, animating the personages of whom it speaks with the fiery life of his own spirit, and endowing them with his own superhuman eloquence, he formed it into a living protest against foreign dominion, which yet rings throughout the world. Wherever there are generous hearts, wherever there are men who hold in reverence the rights of their fellow-men, wherever the love of country and the love of mankind coexist, SCHILLER'S drama of "William Tell" stirs the blood like the sound of a trumpet.

It is not my purpose to dwell on the eminent literary qualities which make so large a part of the greatness of SCHILLER, and which have been more ably set forth by others than they can be by me. It is not for me to analyze his excellencies as a dramatic poet; I will not speak of his beautiful and flowing lyrics, the despair of translators; I will say nothing of his noble histories, written like his dramas for all mankind—for it was his maxim, that he who wrote for one nation only accepted to himself a poor and narrow aim. These topics would require more time than you could give me, and I should shrink with dismay from a task of such extent and magnitude. Let me close with observing that there is yet one other respect in which, as a member of the great world of letters, SCHILLER is entitled to the veneration of mankind.

He was an earnest seeker after truth—a man whose moral nature revolted at every form of deceit—a noble example of what his countrymen mean when they claim the virtue of sincerity for the German race. He held, with ARKENSIDE, that

> "——Truth and Good are one,
> And Beauty dwells in them;"

that on the ascertainment and diffusion of truth the welfare of mankind largely depends; and that only mischief and misery can spring from delusions and prejudices, however enshrined in the respect of the world, and made venerable by the lapse of years. The office of him who labored in the field of letters, he thought, was to make mankind better and happier, by illustrating and enforcing the relations and duties of justice, beneficence, and brotherhood, by which men are bound to each other, and he never forgot this in anything which he wrote. Immortal honor to him whose vast powers were employed to so worthy a purpose, and may the next hundreth anniversary of his birth be celebrated with even a warmer enthusiasm than this.

Mr. BRYANT retired amid enthusiastic cheers, and the band played a spirited air, after which,

Dr. ADOLPH WIESNER spoke for nearly an hour in German. The audience were soon enraptured with him, and at times could scarcely keep their seats. At his close, the President introduced

Hon. Judge C. P. DALY, who said: The question of the grave-digger in "Hamlet," "Who builds stronger than the mason or the carpenter?" might be answered with perfect propriety and truth, the Poet; for it is a singular circumstance that nothing which has proceeded from the agency of man has been so lasting and imperishable as the productions of the greatest poets. The Pyramids, the most ancient of monuments, still stand, though the Arab has scattered the treasures they were meant to cover; but the works of the greatest poets have withstood the mutations of time and all other destroying influences. We turn from the ruins of Hindostan and find still alive the Vedas or sacred hymns of those mysterious people, who existed thousands of years ago. From a mystic age HOMER had come down to us, and though confusion had grown up around him, and even his name and identity were questioned, not a line of the Iliad was lost. So with the Æneid of VIRGIL and the poems of HORACE. Of all man's productions most entitled to the epithet of immortal was the work of the poet. If, then, this perpetuity has hitherto been the case, with the great poems yet given to the world, we may assume that it will still be the case in the future. The grandeur of this thought enables us to feel how great the benefit which is conferred on the world by the birth of a great poet. What record of the vast civilization of the Carthagenians would have been preserved but for the poems of their conquerers? But for these we should be ignorant of their history and fate. If this, then, be the result to any nation of the advent of a great national poet, well may Germany rejoice in the possession of FREDERIC SCHILLER. The speaker said he felt reluctant, as Mr. BRYANT had felt, to say anything to an audience of Germans concerning such a poet, and all he would say would be briefly to record the impressions and feelings with which one trained in English literature might regard him. It seemed to him (the speaker) that SCHILLER'S chief merit was, that he touched the hearts and carried with him the earnest sympathies of all the people. He, only, is a great poet to whom the chords of all humanity respond, and who touches the emotions of every breast. CARLYLE had said that a great poet could be great in anything; that SHAKESPEARE, if he had so turned his attention might have been a great theologian, a great lawyer, or a great statesman. SCHILLER nearly proved the truth of this, for he nearly came up to it, being not only a great poet, but a great historian, novelist, metaphysician and critic. There was a rare union in him of the creative and critical. One is supposed to destroy the other, and SCHILLER himself thought that after he became a critic, he had lost the glow and vigor of his earlier years. But in that he was mistaken, for Wallenstein, the Maid of Orleans, and his glorious William Tell were produced afterwards. The speaker thought the lyrics of SCHILLER were, after all, his best works, unparalleled as they were by those of any other poet with whom he was acquainted. SCHILLER is readily comprehended, because he is free from mysticism, and, therefore, more thoroughly reaches the heart. He is full, throughout, of fidelity and manly earnestness. I know not, proceeded Judge DALY, any poet who has so well expounded how the sober reality of life, with all its cares and duties, may be united with the fullest indulgence of all the imagination of our nature. There was another quality in which SCHILLER came up to the requirements of a great poet. When we are charmed with the works of a man of genius, we expect that his own life will correspond with his teaching. In a religious teacher, for instance, we expect to find all the purity of soul, magnanimity of action, righteousness and goodness which naturally should flow from his instructions. So with the poet, though it only occurs with the greatest of them, for we too often find them the most erring of men, often inspiring our pity, and sometimes our contempt. SCHILLER'S career commenced with a revolt against society, on account of its abuses, in The Robbers, yet so great was the moral harmony in the nature of this man, that he became one of the expounders of the law. The year of his birth gave birth to another national poet—ROBERT BURNS; but what a contrast was between their lives. BURNS had a high sense of independence, like SCHILLER, but his life was such that it must be quietly passed over by his biographers, and even the result of his death concealed, as the result of his vices. There was another great national poet, BERANGER, but his life, also, would bear no comparison with SCHILLER'S. The latter never lost sight of his mission, and his life was as much a poem as any poem he has written. He was ever laboring to impart to others the knowledge of the Good, the Beautiful, the True. When the period approached in which he was to withdraw from earth, in the language of our great national poet, who has come here to-day to pay his homage to his great predecessor—in the language of Mr. BRYANT:

> ——"when his summons came to join
> Th' innumerable caravan which moves
> To that mysterious realm where each shall take
> His chamber in the silent halls of death,
> He went not like the quarry-slave, at night,
> Scourged to his dungeon; but sustained and soothed
> By an unfaltering trust, approached the grave
> Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch
> About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams."

Judge DALY retired amid a storm of applause.

The name of the successful competitor for the prize poem for the occasion, for which a gold medal had been offered by the Schiller Society of this City, was then given to the audience, and the poem read. The name of the fortunate candidate is REINHOLD SOLGER. The medal, which is about the size of a Spanish silver dollar, but considerably thicker, of solid gold, bears on the obverse a fine bas-relief bust of SCHILLER, with the inscription, "Friedrich Von Schiller," and on the reverse, surrounded by a circle of bay and oak leaves, "Zur 100 Jahrigen feier von Schiller's Geburtstag. New-York, am 10 November, 1859."

In the midst of a stirring grand march by the band, the audience quitted the building.

SCHILLER FESTIVITIES AT THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

The Academy of Music was crowded last evening by an audience, among whom there were almost as many Americans as Germans, to witness the grand ceremonies intended to do further honor to SCHILLER'S memory. The orchestra was under the direction of CARL BERGMANN. After BEETHOVEN'S overture to "Egmont" had been performed, a fine bust of SCHILLER, placed on a pedestal on the stage, surrounded by ladies and children in picturesque groups, was crowned. Besides this bust, the stage was decorated with a statue of SCHILLER, size of life, and with the busts of WIELAND, HOMER, SHAKESPEARE, HERDER, LESSING, EURIPEDES, GOETHE, KANT and LUTHER. The German and American flags were displayed, and floral and evergreen decorations made the spectacle a very lively one. The prize poem of the afternoon at the Cooper Institute was then read by FRAULEIN GRAHN. After the "Bridal Procession" from "Lohengrin," by the orchestra, a series of living statues from SCHILLER'S plays commenced. The first was from "The Robbers," representing the moment when Moor calls upon his band to deliver him up, as they are surrounded by their prisoners, and has his hand tied to a tree. The next represented Moor's band swearing to die with him. They fight their way through and escape.

The next representations were from "Fiesco," the first showing Julia, the niece of the Doge of Genoa, lying at the feet of Fiesco, imploring his love for her, the latter having feigned love for her in order to lull her uncle into security, against whom he had been trying to get up a conspiracy. This tableau changed to Fiesco securing his wife, who had been almost broken-hearted by his infidelity, the triumph of seeing her rival disgraced and thrust aside by himself.

Another tableau was from "Mary Stuart," when that poor Queen is bidding farewell to her friends and servants.

After an overture by SCHNEIDER, performed by the orchestra, the first part of "Wallenstein," entitled "Wallenstein's Camp," in one act, was performed by the artists of the Stadt Theatre, the chorusses being greatly augmented by members of the German singing societies. This work, not being included in COLERIDGE'S translation of "Wallenstein," is less known to the mere English reader than the second and third parts of the noble trilogy. Its performance, last night, gave great satisfaction to all who understood it, which was more than three-fourths of the audience.

Other living statues followed. From the "Maid of Orleans," representing her in the din of battle, the standard in her hand, followed by French knights and troops. From "Don Carlos," showing him standing by the corpse of the Marquis Posa, receiving the King and suite. From the poem of "The Diver," representing the reappearance of the diver, borne up by the waves, with the goblet in his right hand; the King, King's daughter, ladies of the Court, knights and pages standing on the brink of the precipice. A tableau from "William Tell" was very fine. It represented Gesler, struck by Tell's arrow, lying upon the ground, a mother holding up her child to show him the death of the tyrant, while Tell, leaning on his cross-bow, stood upon a rock. The last was a grand final tableau, in which all the principal characters of Schiller's dramas appeared. After a grand choral by the orchestra, followed by an overture, the delighted audience, who throughout the evening had manifested their enthusiasm by rapturous applause, withdrew to their homes. And thus terminated the second day of the Schiller Centenary Festival.

THE CELEBRATION AT PHILADELPHIA.

LETTER FROM PRESIDENT BUCHANAN.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Nov. 4, 1859.

MY DEAR SIR: Many thanks for your kind invitation, on behalf of the Committee of Arrangements, to unite with my German fellow-citizens of Philadelphia "at their approaching celebration of the Centennial Anniversary of SCHILLER'S birth." Would that I could attend. The occasion is one after my own heart. I deeply regret that important and pressing public engagements render the enjoyment of this privilege impossible.

SCHILLER died too young for his country; but yet, in the maturity of his fame and his usefulness. He was, as you truly say, the beloved poet of the German nation, and well does he deserve this endearing distinction. His genius has done honor, not only to his father-land, but to humanity. There is grandeur in the idea that WILLIAM TELL is the subject of SCHILLER'S last and best tragedy, and that the great poet should thus forever have identified himself with the cause of Helvetia's liberty and independence.

Yours, very respectfully,
JAMES BUCHANAN.

F. A. ROBIE, Esq.

KANSAS.

Running off and Rescue of Slaves in Missouri.

Correspondence of the New-York Times:

LAWRENCE, Thursday, Nov. 3, 1859.

An interesting incident has recently occurred near Independence, Mo., that has not yet found its way into "the papers," in Kansas or anywhere else. There was living with a very respectable slaveholder, a family of negroes, five in number. The head of the slave family had ascertained that they would probably soon be sold and taken South. He wrote to certain parties in the Territory, stating his danger, his desire to be spared the fate of a Mississippi chattel, and offering $500 to be placed in a land where "slaves could not breathe."

He had been more fortunate than most slaves, or he could not redeem such an offer, but, in fact, he was worth about $2,000 that he called his own. His obligation was, therefore, good for the amount.

Money hereabouts is not easily earned in these days and such an offer would be a great temptation, especially to men of easy political virtue. It was pondered over some weeks, and when the vision of sudden gain had nearly won the victory, the peal from Harper's Ferry broke upon them. The spectre of six teen insurrectionists who had foolishly thrown away their lives, was sufficient to stay the Missouri march for a season. But another letter, more imploring than those preceding it, was received, and delay was no longer possible.

A small company from Central Kansas started on the precarious mission. They arrived at the mansion of the slaveholder early in the evening. They entered, and found a very interesting scene transpiring. A Southern planter was present, who had just arrived to purchase negroes, and after some further parleying, a bargain was completed at $3,500 for the family of five. The Kansas boys looked a little wild about this time, and the retrospection of Harper's Ferry was again within their vision. They saw that there was more to encounter than they had anticipated. They must take bold, desperate steps, or return discomfited. The latter was not congenial to the majority, nor in keeping with their experience.

The planter had the gold upon his person, and proceeded to count out the $3,500, when the party seized him, bound him fast to his chair, and took such other steps as would secure their own safety from exposure or pursuit. The planter had brought with him several extra mules to transport the negroes. These the party took for the negroes also, and soon they were all under rapid headway out of the State. What has since transpired with them is not so well known, except that they are hastening onward, "all safe," and ere this must be in that Abolition State, called Iowa.

One very singular fact in the transaction is, that the $3,500 was not disturbed in the least. That will all go to prove that not robbery, but emancipation was their mission. It was a daring feat, that but few could accomplish. It was more so at this particular time, when every stranger in Western Missouri is watched with a suspicious eye, and every neighbor is on the alert to prevent just what has been accomplished.

Although, in the general sense, any interference with Slavery in the States should not be tolerated, as a Kansas man who has seen all "the sights" from the beginning, I believe that such emancipation scenes will occur often in Western Missouri, until the last shackle will fall within her dominions. It is not usual that slaves are assisted or advised with in Missouri. They usually come to their Kansas friends voluntarily, when they are fed and sent along the well-beaten track that is already securing a national reputation. Nineteen-twentieths of all that escape do it thus voluntarily, but Democratic editors charge all upon nigger-stealers. A slave has recently come into our city unaided and asks for a shelter. To-day the master was here in search of him. The slave saw him, but would not allow the pleasure to be reciprocated. To-night the negro is non est. RANDOLPH.

KANSAS ELECTION.

[BY TELEGRAPH.

LEAVENWORTH, Thursday, Nov. 10.

The returns from the interior come in slowly. Leavenworth and Atchison Counties give Democratic majorities. Douglas, Wyandotte, Shawnee and Jefferson Counties are reported to have given Republican majorities. The Counties yet to be heard from gave large majorities for the Free State Constitution, which fact renders the election of Mr. PARROTT, Republican, to Congress, probable.

THE MAYORALTY.

Letter from a Friend of Fernando Wood.

NEW-YORK, Thursday, Nov. 10, 1859.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I find in your paper of this morning the following paragraph:

"The principal contest will be for Mayor. Ex-Mayor WOOD has already caused it to be understood that he intends to be a candidate, whether nominated by the Democratic Party or not. He is quite certain to have the active support of the whole body of contractors, jobbers in City work, and speculators in political chicanery—and the great mass of the foreign vote, which numbers not far from 35,000. This is a strong array to start with, and will render Mr. WOOD a formidable candidate under any circumstances."

That Ex-Mayor WOOD will have "a strong array to start with" when the contest for the Mayoralty comes on in December, there can be no doubt; but what pray, can be the object or motive of the TIMES in associating his name with "the whole body of contractors, jobbers in City work," &c.? It is a very easy matter to insinuate or make open charges against Mayor WOOD. This has been the policy of his enemies for years—these are the weapons they have used in order to damage his reputation, or effect his overthrow; and it would appear from the above that a similar course is now to be resorted to, though we looked for more fair dealing from the NEW-YORK TIMES.

When all the proofs of corruption or wrong-doing are placed in the hands of an enemy, it is presumed his natural hostility will induce him to use all the facts possessed to the destruction or injury of his victim. At the time Mayor WOOD retired from office, all official papers, all contracts with City jobbers, and all evidences, if any existed, of his connection with "the whole body of contractors, jobbers in City work," &c., passed into the hands of his most vindictive and unrelenting political and even personal enemies.

Investigations were immediately commenced; they were followed up with a zeal and pertinacity worthy of the men who should have had the best interests of the City at heart, and anxious only to expose and punish official roguery wherever discovered. Strange developments were made; evidence of malfeasance of those in office was clear enough. Arrests were made, and some parties we believe, were tried and punished.

But in all these investigations was there ever a scrap of paper, a written line, a word discovered implicating even constructively Mayor WOOD with any of these speculative or roguish operations? Not one—not one.

His worst enemies—and he has those who are vindictive enough, God knows—could not, in all their researches through the archives of the City Hall and elsewhere, find a single document, or a scrip of evidence of any kind or character that showed the slightest connection of Mayor WOOD with any of the transactions referred to. To charge him, then, with the faults, errors, or crimes committed in the Comptroller's office, or any other department over which he had not the least control, is just as unfair and unjust as it would be to charge him with, and hold him responsible for the alleged corruptions of certain officials connected with our markets, and which charges are at this moment undergoing investigation.

A man is presumed to be innocent until he is proved guilty. Mr. WOOD is, doubtless, subject, like the rest of us, to the natural infirmities of human nature. He is no more perfection than other men, and he is entitled, like other men, to exemption from false charges, and to be dealt with, whether as a politician or a citizen, fairly and justly. This is all, I am sure, he can ask—all that his friends can wish for or demand.

Every one acknowledges Ex-Mayor WOOD'S vast executive abilities. He is known to be a man of great force and energy of character. Being one of our largest property holders, he has as great an interest, and must have as great a desire for a good, efficient, and honest City Government as any man among us, and would, I believe, do more, if Mayor of this City, in securing such results than any one that can be named for the post.

While holding to these views, I have no objections to others entertaining different sentiments; but allow me to say that I regret to see the TIMES, a paper which usually treats subjects and men with unusual fairness, departing so far in the paragraph quoted from its usual just and commendable course, and I trust you will allow me this short space to point out this seeming injustice. Yours, &c., T.

DIVORCE IN INDIANA.—The Howard Co. (Ind.) Tribune states that Mr. WM. HOFFMAN, of New-York City, in April, 1857, procured the publication in Kokomo, of notice to his wife, in June obtains a decree of divorce. In October, 1858, Mrs. HOFFMAN filed a complaint, alleging that the divorce had been fraudulently obtained, and demanded that it be annulled, as her husband was a citizen of New-York at the time of his obtaining the decree, and not of Indiana. Judge BUCKLER took this view of the case, and decided Mr. HOFFMAN to be a married man.

LAW REPORTS.

Lord Dundreary's Case.

Sothern vs. Keene.—This case, which was set down for the 10th, was called, but as the parties had concluded to enlarge the pleadings, it was postponed again until the 17th. The case is in the Marine Court

Motion to Discharge from Arrest.

David Elston vs. Stephen T. Curran.—The defendant in this case was arrested about six weeks since under an order obtained by the plaintiff, upon a charge of fraudulent conversion of money belonging to the plaintiff, his employer.

It was alleged that the defendant had collected about $700 for his employer, and had neglected and refused to pay it over. The defendant now made affidavit that he was not guilty, as charged; that he expended the money now demanded for the plaintiff, as his agent, and by his direction. Affidavits were also put in showing that the defendant's family, consisting of a wife and three small children (then in Court,) were now in a condition of absolute want and starvation, without clothing or food; that they had disposed of all their furniture and clothing to obtain food, until there was nothing left with which to provide longer. Argument still pending. The wife and children were present and in a poor plight.

John Cook for the motion; Mr. Dimick, opposed.

THURSDAY, Nov. 10—P. M.

On the Stock Exchange to-day, there was a fair activity in New-York Central at a concession of ⅛@¼ ℔ cent. from the last price of Wednesday. The sales were about 5,000 shares at 79¾@79⅞ cash, and 80 buyer's option 60 days, closing 79⅞ cash sales, and 79¾ buyer's option 15 days. There was an improved demand for the Western Roads, which was not met with the usual freedom shown of late by speculative sellers, and prices advanced full ½ ℔ cent. all round, and nearly 1 ℔ cent. on Illinois Central, for which 63¾, buyer 30 days, was paid at the close. Galena Shares sold as high as 73, Rock Island 62⅞, and Toledo, in large request, at 20½@20¾. The Shares of the Panama Company have taken a new upward start, and 123 ℔ cent. cash was paid at the Second Board. Pacific Shares rather steady at 72 ℔ cent. In State Stocks, there was only a moderate business, and at steady prices, Missouris an eighth better than yesterday. The popular vote of the people of New-York has sanctioned the funding of the floating Canal debt of the State to the extent of $2,500,000 in a six ℔ cent. Stock redeemable in 1875. In Railway Bonds, there was a demand to-day for Hudson River Third mortgage at 80 ℔ cent., buyer 60 days. The Michigan Central 8 ℔ cents were ½ ℔ cent. better, and Harlem First mortgage sold at 91½ ℔ cent. The Fourth mortgage of the Erie Company was 2
